Study suggests drastic measures

Rampant growth hampers Carmel River lagoon

BY DAVID LELAND

MAKERS OF a proposed enhancement plan for the Carmel River lagoon are attempting to turn back the hands of time by dredging the wetland to how it existed in 1876.

It appears that man's handiwork has changed the personality of the lagoon to the extent that major renovation must be done to protect the precious ecosystem that calls the wetland home.

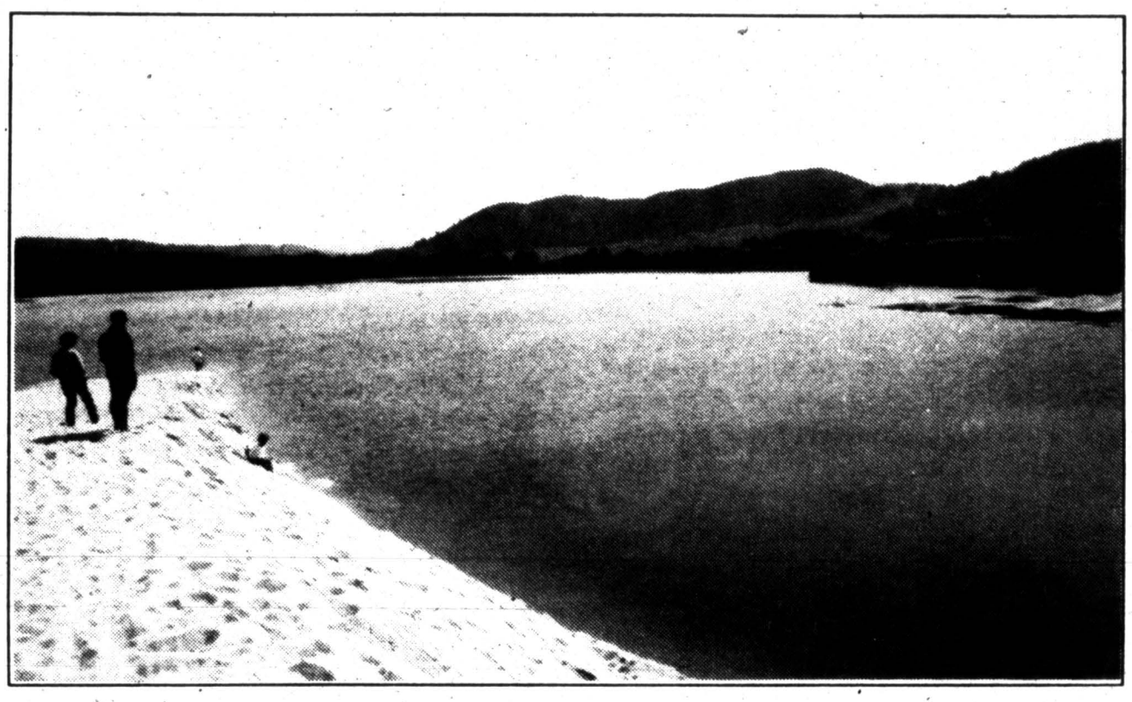
The study, initiated by the Carmel River Steelhead Association in conjunction with the county Resources Agency, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and state Coastal Conservancy, minces few words on the havoc development has created in the lagoon.

The preliminary study presents four major problems with the lagoon's current status:

• The diversion of water from the Carmel River to supply the peninsula causes the river to go dry in the summer.

"The lack of flow leads to fatal conditions in the lagoon for young steelhead...and presumably for other animals as well," said the report, adding that it is critical for the area to be inundated with water to support habitat. "The diversions also intercept fall and early winter flows that would otherwise flood the wetland."

• The encroachment of housing into the wetland makes it necessary to open the mouth of the lagoon artificially, both when the river inflow begins and after the flow drops and the mouth closes for spring and summer, which further reduces flooding.



THE CARMEL River lagoon is the subject of a current report, which cites the wetland's deteriorating conditions. (Mac McDonald photo.)

• The south arm of the lagoon has suffered significant sedimentation in recent decades, "especially during the construction of the Carmel Meadows subdivision," which has reduced the value of the arm as a refuge of deep and shaded water for steelhead and other animals.

• The riparian forest, consisting of cottonwoods and alders, along the river have been decimated by groundwater pumping that has lowered the water table during the current drought.

Known as "the good lake" during Spanish settlement, the lagoon served as a natural watering hole, fed by the Carmel River, which flowed yearround.

But by its first mapping in 1876 by the U.S. Coast Survey, the wetland and floodplain had been significantly altered by farming and erosion, the report said.

Currently the lagoon is normally about 6 acres during the summer, expanding to 45 or 50 acres when the lagoon rises and floods the wetlands.

The study presents several recommendations for restoring the lagoon:

• Enlarge the south arm of the lagoon, which would restore the area to its length in 1876 and provide more open habitat for water birds and fish.

The cost: $349,309.

• Create new wetland, replacing the area of historical wetland of the lagoon that has been filled by lowering elevations about 6 feet.

The cost: $412,500.

• Create a riparian forest dominated by cottonwoods and willows on the fields west of Highway 1 now used for artichoke farming, which would restore the natural vegetation and habitat value of the area.

The cost could range from $575,000 to $1.6 million, depending upon the "level of

Carmel bank robbed Wednesday

A YOUNG man entered Great Western Bank in Carmel yesterday afternoon and robbed a teller of an undisclosed amount of money.

Police said the bank robber, described as a white male between the ages of 18 and 20, gave a teller a note at about 1:30 p.m. demanding money and simulating he had a weapon.

Two bank customers present at the time were apparantly unaware the robbery was in progress, according to police who are working on a composite sketch of the suspect. No one was injured.

The robber was described as having closely shaved sideburns, or "white walls," and wearing a vibrant blue baseball cap.

The last time a bank was robbed in Carmel was about two years ago, a police spokesman said.

City officials angered at Seaside's Fort Ord plan

By PAUL WOLF

THE FAMILIAR roads like Del Monte Boulevard and Broadway appear as tiny lines next to the vast regions of Fort Ord as shown on the map.

And practically every square mile of this massive terrain is depicted as in use. And what are these uses? A medical center, a university, a film studio, corporate headquarters, research park, resort hotel, shopping village, botanical gardens, a pier and marina, vineyards and wineries and, yes, a Disneyland park and Epcot Center.

Don't say it's inconceivable because it has been conceived — by Seaside officials in their vision of their hometown, Year 2050. The map was presented recently to the Fort Ord Task Force. It shows the City of Seaside and a hunk of former army territory, which Seaside hopes to annex.

Its neighbors, namely Pacific Grove and Carmel, are, to put it mildly, not pleased with this vision. Officials from these cities see such dreams of riches as a nightmare to the environment.

"What Marina and Seaside will not acknowledge is that what happens over there is our business," said Carmel Mayor Jean Grace, in a phone interview. "They don't understand that our environmental setting is part of the economy."

Similarly, PG Mayor Flo Schaefer said, "It (the map) is totally unrealistic, and it shows an arrogant disregard for the environment."

Both mayors are members of the Fort Ord Task Force. As for Schaefer, she alerted her council colleagues to what came before her at the Jan. 12 task force meeting.

The map was presented by Seaside Public Works Director Michael O'Bryon. Regardless of how seriously this vision will be taken, or how realistic it is, it is provocative nonetheless. It's a vivid symbol of where the cities part company.

"It stirs a lot of emotion," said PG Mayor Flo Schaefer.

PG Councilwoman Susan Whitman, at a PG Council meeting Jan. 22, urged other members not too get ahead of themselves. "Let's not to rush to judgement. This is a brainstorm, a planning exercise."

But Schaefer countered, "When you present something publicly, you open yourself up to criticism."

Democracy by default

WHAT WILL history have to say about the year Carmel — the fiestiest little town on earth — couldn't even come up with two candidates for mayor? No reflection on the current, and lone, hopeful, of course.

It's just that there is something anticlimatic and empty about an uncontested election. It takes the spirit out of the meaning of democracy. Perhaps there should be a rule that if the other guy doesn't show up, the fight is called off and everybody gets their money back.

Worse yet, however, is our abdication of voice; our right to participate in government. Political rule by default, no matter how benevolent, is Third World stuff, not Carmel's style.

What happens at 5:01 p.m. on Feb. 11 when the deadline for filing has come and passed without another slugger stepping into the ring? Do we shrug our apathetic shoulders and retreat back to the cozy warmth of our hearths? Shall we belatedly consult Robert's Rules on write-in strategy?

What about the "winner?" Just think of the awesome responsibility of leading a community by forfeit. Imagine the pressures there will be to be fair in the absence of political rhetoric.

We'd hate to be in his shoes.

Killing the golden goose

THE AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am is history again. For some ensconced people it is the worst week of the year, for others it's an entertaining way to raise money for charities.

We're inclined to support the latter, but with reservation. Each year since 1986 when AT&T attached its corporate logo to the former Bing Crosby Clambake there has been a gradual eroding of what was once a sense of free spirit golf. Even Jack Lemmon is beginning to take the game seriously.

Once an event that had galleries howling at Dean Martin's off- color and Phil Harris' vaudeville wit, the tournament is now becoming humorless. Granted, Bill Murray kept everyone in stitches (except for his professional partner), but the tournament bosses had him playing virtually alone.

When national television cameras panned Pebble's 18th fairway on Saturday where was our Caddyshack hero? Playing at Poppy Hills, of all remote places.

And then there was big, bad Lawrence Taylor telling reporters he doesn't talk to the press. Give us a break. This isn't the NFL, it's the PGA.

Which is our point. There's so much money involved in professional sports that it's taking the fun out of it. Corporate conservatives, and the tournament is loaded with them, are killing off the proverbial goose. Sure, it continues to lay the million dollar egg, it's just a shame everybody is afraid to crack a joke.

Do we really need this?

Dear Editor:

Expanding the central commercial zone of Carmel, as proposed by the planning commission at the last city council meeting, wold result in further deterioration of the quality of life we enjoy in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Expanding the central commercial zone to satisfy a select group of landlords would mean higher rents that will squeeze out resident serving businesses to accommodate more T-shirt shops, jewelry shops, souvenir shops, etc.

Do we really want this for our lovely village?

Stop wasting funds

Dear Editor:

Recent action by the Carmel City Council to take the lead in the lawsuit led against the U.S. and State Transportation Agencies alleging an inadequate EIR is ill advised. The following are a few points that should be noted.

The lawsuit appears to be just one more in a series of on-going delaying actions. The EIR process has been observed including review by the concerned agencies particularly the EPA whose mission is to see that the process is impartial and adequate. Opponent claims that analysis of the EIR did not uncover the "true" facts are meaningless; probably anything that conflicts with their view will not qualify as truth.

So far, the city has authorized $10,000. in support of the suit. Where did these funds come from?—surely not from a simple line item budget change as one City report stated! Some other budget program has been depleted and we have a right to know what it was, i.e., street maintenance, security, undergrounding utilities, etc. This may be just the beginning to a deterioration of services funded by depleted programs as the San Francisco law firm demands more money.

Every study, including the Hatton Canyon Coalition's own Consultant's report, found the Canyon project to be the most cost effective. This properly places widening Highway 1 where it belongs—in the bandaid category as an inappropriate use of public funds. In these days when every level of government is suffering severe financial problems providing adequate services, what gives any public agency the right to spend funds in support of a lesser cost effective alternative?

Numerous "old-timers" have noted that the Carmel City Council in office at the time the original freeway was constructed favored the Hatton Canyon Freeway. Their wisdom is becoming more apparent every day. We should stop wasting scarce funds on unproductive lawsuits and put it in productive projects.

In my view, I would put the $10,000. and subsequent demands for funds into undergrounding the utility lines. Submerging these utility lines and building the Hatton Canyon Freeway would enhance the quality of the environment in Carmel far more than any other current option available.

Report is full of holes

Dear Editor:

The background delineated in the Planning Commission's zoning study report submitted to Carmel's City Council Jan. 28 shows it to have been prompted by a property owner's request in 1990 to rezone property in the commercial district, reviewed and denied by the commission.

It was during the rezone hearing that

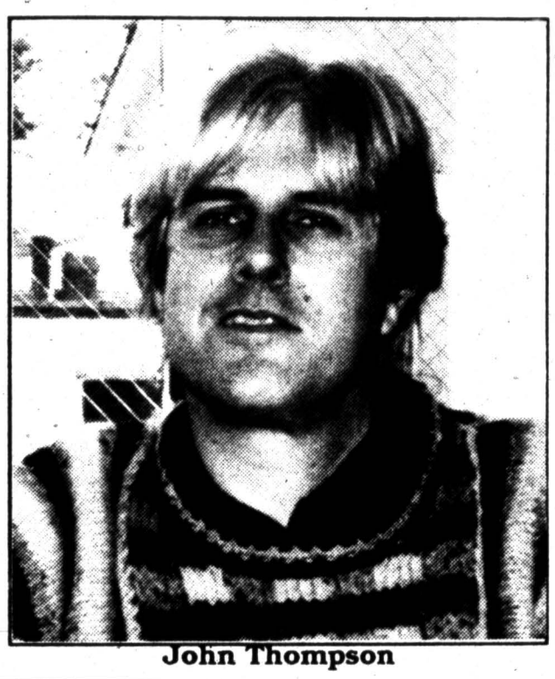
Three candidates file for two city council seats

John Thompson

LIFELONG CARMEL resident John Thompson believes that Carmel has somehow lost its precious heritage. If elected to the city council he will attempt to recaputre that legacy.

"Back in the '20s and '30s many of our Bohemian artists and writers championed the preservation of our local natural resources," says Thompson, who was born in Carmel in 1946. "In running for the city council I am carrying on that heritage, helping Carmel to regain its position as being on the cutting edge of ecological issues, and serving as a model city for other towns and communities."



John Thompson

Thompson, who for the past three years served as president of Concerned Citizens for Environmental Health, espouses views that some may consider radical.

"For economic growth to meet the needs of all people, our society must undergo equitable redistribution of land and community wealth," he says. "High property values must come down for the majority of young citizens to be able to afford their own homes. Dynamic new programs aimed at low-income workers and their families must be developed throughout the peninsula as well as on lands formerly held by the military."

Moreover, he believes that Carmel must loosen up its attitude concerning stringent rules and regulations.

"We must eliminate the arbitrary interpretation of Carmel's codes," says Thompson. Under the guise of exercising discretion, unfair and restrictive policies have denied Carmelites fundamental rights regarding their homes and businesses."

Thompson brings to the race an eclectic arts background, having taught film and production for the past 10 years at Monterey Peninsula College. He published a 31-part series on Carmel's creative heritage in "Coast Weekly" two years ago.

He relies on his past bohemian-style accomplishments in constructing a view for Carmel's future.

"There are those that feel I've done my little bit to carry on that tradition," he says of his supporters.

A member of the fledgling Green party, Thompson considers environmental issues to be of prime importance to Carmel.

"Carmel needs to act decisively in all matters relating to the preservation of our natural resources both inside and outside Carmel," he says. "The protection of the fauna and flora, air and water, as well as our energy sources, should be a vital issue for Carmelites."

Barbara Livingston

CARMEL RESIDENTS Association Director Barbara Livingston says her bid for a Carmel City Council seat provides a way to repay the city for all its kindness.

A Carmel resident since 1936, Livingston, 63, adds that fond childhood memories and age make public office a logical enterprise.

"I believe that the last one-third of a person's life should be dedicated to public service," said Livingston, an interior designer. "(Also), I want to give back to Carmel all that it has given me."

Livingston, who attended Sunset Elementary and Carmel High School, says she is a firm believer in the city charter aimed at keeping Carmel primarily residential.

Keeping that in mind, she opposes proposed zoning changes currently before the council that would eliminate the buffer zoBarbara Livingstonne between commercial and R-1 district.

Barbara Livingston

"I'm for the general plan of Carmel as it now stands," said Livingston, who lives with Robert Kohn, a retired businessman who serves on the city's Forest & Beach Commission. "I believe in the zoning ordinance of 1929...that should be foremost in the mind of the city.

"The tourist-serving district should not be expanded at the expense of the residents."

Taking what appears to be a traditional CRA stance, Livingston chided incoming business owners for not researching the city's rules and regulations before purchasing their concern.

"It would save them a lot grief if they did (this). You have to be aware of the type of city Carmel is," says Livingston, founding president of Friends of Carmel Forest. "They should find out what we are asking of them and they should abide by the rules."

With a low-key campaign managed by fellow CRA Director Linda Anderson, who also serves as chairwoman of the Carmel Cultural Commission, Livingston says she is not entering the political arena to fulfill her life's ambition.

"I don't want to be a politician; I'm looking to be elected for my good values, I'm not looking to get re-elected," says Livingston, a member of the Friends of the Library, Carmel Foundation and Sierra Club. "I want to be a good representative to the city."

Livingston lauds the city's support of a law suit opposing the Canyon Freeway.

"It's a three-mile freeway to nowhere," she says of the proposed freeway. "It's nuts; it's total craziness."

The energetic Livingston says it is critical for locals to become concerned with the shaping of city policy.

"So many people are reluctant to be involved, they are missing out on a lot of good stuff," she says. "The more you do, the more interesting person you become."

Don Kremer

RELYING ON supporters garnered last year during his crusade against reducing the size of Carmel homes, City Council candidate Don Kremer believes he offers a practical choice for voters.

Indeed, the 52-year-old executive tends to take a more pragmatic view of city life than those with a stricter approach to keeping Carmel "primarily residential."

"Most towns this size try to get one more policeman on their staff," said Kremer, referring to the large contribution the business taxes make to the city. "We (Carmel) buy million-dollar pieces of property."

Kremer does not downplay the residential side of Carmel, but said he is merely attempting to create a balance between locals, tourists and merchants.

Fighting those calling for a back-to-basics platform, Kremer has his campaign work cut out for him.

"During the Measure E campaign, I was labeled a big-time builder from the east," said Kremer, remembering the brutal special election activities that took place in March of 1991. "I've never made a living building anywhere; I don't even have a construction license."

Kremer said he simply remodeled his home so his wife, Diane, an interior designer, could have an office.

Kremer said that, if elected, he will rely on business acumen and people skills gained during his 25 years in management with IBM. Those talents, he said, would immediately be put to work on creating a more pleasant atmosphere on the council.

"I think the city has been fairly unfriendly, there's not much harmony on the council right now," said Kremer, whose nomination to the Forest and Beach Commission was turned down before being accepted a month later. "My training many years ago got me out of an us-and-them attitude and into a we attitude."

Kremer demonstrated that idea when he organized a well-attended, city-sponsored workshop that instructed building contractors on the city code and the proper way to avoid harming trees when building.

Moreover, as a long-standing member of the library foundation, he put together strategy to beef up fund-raising events. The result at $50,000, contributions doubled over the previous year.

"The city never thinks of the people it serves as customers; the services of the city should be easy to use and streamlined," said Kremer, whose campaign in being managed by Marian Leidig and Steve Miller. "The council needs to start giving that direction down to the city."

Kremer portrays himself as not a meg-businessman, but a down-home kind of guy.

"I have Midwestern values transported to California," he said.

Council finds common ground on several issues

BY FRANK GEORGE

THE OFTEN polarized factions of the Carmel city council finally found some middle ground at their Feb. 4 meeting.

First, Mayor Jean Grace and Councilman Bob Fischer, a team that usually supports building ventures, concurred with councilmembers Jim Wright, Ken White and Barbara Brooks in denying plans for a new two-story, single family home. After that, Wright, Brooks and White, who are generally sympathetic to residential issues, sided with their colleagues in waving fees on a business district parking space issue.

Needless to say, the spirit of compromise appeared to take a liking to the group, as they voted in unison to change policy on planning commission appeals.

"That's twice I've agreed with you tonight, Jim," Grace told Wright. But the spell was broken when rivals White and Grace deferred on an agreement on residential garbage collection times.

But the council reunited on an ordinance that will make it illegal to cut down tall trees with a diameter greater than six inches, but the honeymoon had a hiatus when Brooks and Grace opposed a decision to table a floor-area ratio (FAR) issue regarding patios and gazebos.

Yet the council acted as a unit in the end, unanimously approving a city-funded $10,000 grant to the Carmel Public Library Foundation. Despite all the good feelings though, most of the items were subject to a good deal of debate and scrutiny.

Doyle Moses, the appellant on the two-story decision, got into more than one heated exchange with members of the council.

"(This) sort of reeks of a conspiracy" Moses said. "There's been a conspiracy in the planning commission. You're opening this to litigation."

Moses' Jan. 8 request to build near the Third Avenue pedestrian right-of-way on the west side of North Camino Real was denied by the commission on grounds that it was "massive" and "inconsistant with the scale of the surrounding neighborhood." Moses displayed pictures to the council that showed other structures in the neighborhood were even more massive and non-conforming to city code.

Moses didn't elaborate further on the purported planning commission conspiracy. After calling for some key changes in Moses' plans, the council opted to deny the appeal and refer him back to the planning commission.

Regarding the parking space appeal, Rod Santos, Richard Clark and Wendy

Filing deadline Feb. 11

BECAUSE AN incumbent has decided not seek re-election in Carmel, the deadline for filing has been extended by five days.

When Mayor Jean Grace and Councilman Ken White failed to file papers for their current office, the filing deadline moved back by five days.

Those considering running for one of the two Carmel City Council seats or the office of Mayor have until 5 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 11, to file with the city clerk's office.

The council seats each carry a four-year term, while the mayor's job is a two-year commitment.

Completing the application entails gathering signatures, so prospective candidates should allow ample time to complete the process.

Officials ponder next step for Monastery Beach parking dilemma

By SUSAN BECK

LAST MONTH'S decision by the California State Department of Parks and Recreation to scrap its appeal for a parking lot and ancillary developments at Monastery Beach presents the big question.

What's next for the long-term?

Amending the Local Coastal Plan is high on the list of priorities, and at the Monterey County Board of Supervisors meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 4, 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman asked that the Planning Commission consider an amendment to the coastal plan and its regulations for parking at Monastery Beach.

The board unanimously approved the request.

The coastal plan clearly states that the parks and recreation department is responsible for getting parked cars off the shoulder at the beach, and Strasser Kauffman has provided a chance to look at the plan's language for an adjustment from improvement rather than complete relocation of the parking along the beach front.

Part of the reason that the new parks

Despite early rainfall, peninsula water supply far below normal

By PAUL WOLF

WHILE THE storms of late December and early January brought this year's rainfall to 80 percent of normal, "the promise of late December hasn't been realized," according to peninsula water officials.

More crucial than inches of rain is runoff — that is, what actually happens to that rain. Since conditions have been so dry, runoff this year has only been 23 percent of normal, as the thirsty landscape has sopped up nearly every bit of precious water. "We've had a moisture debt," explained Darby Fuerst, the district's water resources manager.

From Oct. 1, the start of the water year, to the end of January, there has been 8.5 inches of rain, according to readings from the California-American Water Co.'s measurements at the San Clemente dam.

Most of that rain fell in December and the first week of January. The 8.5 inches compares with the 10.6 deemed the "normal" rainfall.

So far this year, the runoff into the reservoir has been about 3,800 acre feet, or 23 percent of the normal inflow. "There is definitely not a one-to-one correlation between rainfall and runoff," said Fuerst.

At the peninsula water board meeting Jan. 23, Fuerst discussed with directors the implications of the modest runoff levels. "This is a critically dry year. The promise of late December was never realized. It looks like we are on track for another dry year."

Yet he was hopeful. "All this could change with one or two storms."

As the drought continues into its sixth year, the inhabitants of the Monterey peninsula can look back gratefully on last year's lucky March rains, which filled up the peninsula's underground and surface storage systems. "Last year wasn't a terrific year, but they (the march rains) were enough to fill the system."

Therefore, last year created a buffer for this year's disappointments.

Soon after the reservoirs and aquifers filled up, the district went from a 20-percent mandatory rationing program, inaugurated in January 1989, to a voluntary 10 percent program, begun in May 1990. "It's a small system: it fills up fast and it empties fast," Fuerst said.

The 35,800-acre-foot system is currently at 92 percent of capacity. On the surface are the San Clemente and Los Padres reservoirs, which together constitute only a small fraction of the storage system, 130 and 1,970 acre feet respectively. This season's rains managed to fill the reservoirs on Dec. 30 and Jan. 8 respectively.

The bulk of the district's water, then, is

Our current water standing, as of Feb. 1, 1992:

- Rainfall: Since the start of the water year, Oct. 1, it has rained a respectable 8.5 inches, 80 percent of "normal."
- Runoff. Inflow into the San Clamente Reservoir since Oct. 1 is a low 3,800, 23 percent of normal.
- Capacity. A comfortable 92 percent of the 35,800-acre-foot system is full, with the San Clamente and Los Padres reservoirs completely full.
- Conservation. In calendar year 1991, the Monterey Peninsula saved 32 percent, against a 1987-88 base year.

'Unsung heroes' get just rewards from grateful Carmel City Council

IN A packed city council chambers, Carmel's quiet philanthropists were honored in a ceremony before the Feb. 4 city council meeting.

"The City Council of the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea happily acknowledges the village's unsung heroes..." the honorees' certificates read. "Those members of the community who voluntarily and without official recognition have contributed to the betterment of their neighbors and the wider community."

One of the recipients, Peter Scott, was recognized for voluntarily planting redwood seedlings in Pescadero Canyon, Mission Trail Park and in some of the mini parks around the city.

Then Mel Toney received accolades for helping neighbors with shopping needs and for driving them to their appointments. The accomplished musician also shows generosity by playing the piano for residents of a retirement home and by donating graphics and lettering to Friends of the Carmel Forest.

The good Samaritan also packages meals for shut-ins, prepares meals for the needy and visits patients at a care center.

Meanwhile, Jane Sarandria got kudos for her volunteer work with the Harrison Memorial Library.

"Jane always looks for additional projects to do," her certificate says. "If we need her, all we have to do is call!"

Librarians also call on Iona Logie when they need someone to come in and do some volunteer cataloguing. Logie was also recognized for her long-time involvement with the YMCA, her dedication to the Altrusa Club and as a founder of Careers for Women in Maturity.

But Laurie Schumann was hailed as THE volunteer of the community. She helps out at the local American Red Cross chapter, and she works as a performance concession coordinator at Sunset Center.

Schumann also reassures patients at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula's emergency room and regularly contributes time and effort to the Friends of Sunset. The rest of adrenaline is donated to various cultural groups around the city.

In a separate ceremony, the boys of Cub Scout Pack 47, Den 4 were honored for "regularly and quietly undertaking com-

Carmel . . . As I See It

By Betty Barron

World Heritage . . . dream to reality

THERE SEEMS to be a trend toward reunions of all kinds, especially at Thanksgiving time, of course. But, as I settled into my seat on United's San Francisco-to-Boston flight last month, I thought it was just I who was off to a family reunion.

My trip was to be my first to the Lothrop (my maiden name) Family Foundation Reunion, and only the second one held since our mutual ancestor founded Barnstable, Massachusetts on Cape Cod in 1634.

However, I found on my right a young artist named Georgia from San Francisco, who was enroute to Dublin, N.H., for her father's 60th birthday celebration. On my left a nice young couple responded to my introduction by telling me that they were destined for Brunswick, Maine, to attend her sister's wedding, and later they would visit his brother and wife and little niece at Dartmouth, where the brother is a student.

They,were all hoping that the fall foliage would still be at its peak. And, of course, it was.

Downtown Boston was studded with swatches of gold-sprigged trees between caverns of brown, gray and white buildings. Boston Common was a galaxy of color against lush green lawns.

My reunion at the Parker House was a gathering of almost 400 Lothrops, mostly from New England, many from Cape Cod. We were all ages, some nearing 90 years old, a few children five, six and seven. None of them had I met before, except for one from Carmel Valley, whom I did not know was coming! Lloyd Lothrop and his wife, Mary Ellen, I had met once years ago through mutual friends at a Monterey Yacht Club party. We renewed our friendship and made many more new friends.

Genealogy was generally the topic, and I found that many of my "relatives" were writing their autobiographies. Some people brought memorabilia, pictures, newspaper clippings of the activities of their ancestors and families or of their city, town, village.

I told them about my own autobiography, written five years ago (wishing that I had brought a copy with me) and gave excerpts from the stories some of the people reveal in my autobiography class at Carmel Foundation. Naturally, I spoke glowingly of Carmel and the many advantages of living here.

Finally, this past week, inspired by my reunion, I became a member of the DAR (Daughters of the American Revolution) after almost 50 years of procrastinating. It was an inspiring moment, one that I would not have appreciated half as much when I was first eligible at age 18.

Now, I can look forward to many reunions, not only of the Lothrop clan, but of the DAR at their state and national conventions.

As it was, after the reunion in Boston, I drove up the Charles River to Cambridge to a favorite hotel on the river to watch the "Head of the Charles" Having watched the crew practicing many times years ago when my husband was a student at Harvard, I decided to spend the entire day enjoying the regatta.

I progressed upstream from bridge to bridge, leaning far out to watch the crews skimming over the blue and crystal water, the towers of Harvard a dramatic background. On all sides were students from the many, many schools competing, most of whom had just finished racing and were cheering others. At one point a girl next to me from the University of Albany yelled out, "Go Albany!" And, a bit later, "Go Minneapolis!" which brought a quick laugh from me. (University of Minnesota being MY school, but I did not know that the city of Minneapolis also sent a crew.)

Yes, reunions are a wonderful expression of love and friendship. We should all have more of them. Christmas is a great time for get-togethers, but all through the year there are other good times, too. Bring your family and friends together . . . and perhaps by this bonding and reunion we can bring the world together.

To quote John Donne: "No man is an island." We are all involved in a World Heritage.

(Next time: Down on the Cape's many little villages .)

Carmel jumps into Fort Ord fray

ing. "It's pretty scary, and the people of Seaside and other (nearby) communities think it's none of our business, that we are all sitting here fat and happy."

One of Schaefer's chief complaints is that Seaside, when developing the map, didn't consult with Pacific Grove about its vision, showing "flagrant disregard for the feelings of other communities."

Meanwhile, Seaside Public Works Director O'Bryon, in a phone interview, said it can be "misleading" to view the map without studying the documentation that was the basis for the drawing.

"The density (in the annexed territory) would be less than in Pacific Grove or Salinas," he said, suggesting that images can be deceiving.

About the realisticness of it all, he said simply, "This is a long-term plan."

Furthermore, O'Bryon said it's hard to pick up on the progressive urban planning that went into it, such as "houses with office space," or the envisioned light rail system. "This is an opportunity to do things right," he said.

He disagrees with the charge that the vision is environmentally insensitive. While there would be some development on the shoreline, including a marina and a resort hotel, there would be plenty of open space and well-planned public access, he argued.

Battle lines

As the Monterey Peninsula looks forward to a post-army era, the battle lines are becoming more and more defined. And since no one knows as yet how the federal government will dispose of its property, who will inherit what, or who would be liable to sell what lands, reality hasn't intruded into anyone's schemes.

A part of this debate surrounds the Fort Ord coast. This vision of Seaside assumes that the beach will be up for grabs too. A peninsula-wide committee has formed to make sure that won't be the case.

"Unless the citizens speak up now and make themselves heard, the seashore may be lost forever," said Don Gruber of Seaside and Walter Gourlay of Pacific Grove in a joint statement. They co-chair the fledgling Citizens for a State Seashore.

"The Monterey coastline does not belong to any one community, or to any one group. Pollution, traffic and destruction of the environment affect all of us," the statement said.

Many in Pacific Grove may know Gourlay from his work to preserve PG's 5.5-acre Rocky Shores coastal property.

The specific concern over the four-mile stretch of Fort Ord beachfront is not a new worry. In fact, it has been on many people's minds since news came of the fort's closure.

Rep. Leon Panetta, State Sen. Henry Mello and State Assemblyman Sam Farr are pursuing legislation to preserve the Fort Ord beachfront and other California shoreline properties.

Both the cities of Carmel and Pacific Grove have passed resolutions urging shoreline preservation. And the Monterey Bay Sanctuary leaders have also made their feelings known about the need to preserve the so far undeveloped parts of the coast.

For now, today's debates and conflicts may say a lot about the kinds of battles that will be fought tomorrow.

Gates ordered by court to pay attorney fees

By SUSAN BECK

DONALD GATES, owner of the Cachagua Mutual Water Co. was ordered by Superior Court Judge Richard Silver to pay $15,000 in attorney fees that have accrued in the homeowner's suit over the water issue.

On Jan. 31 Gates, acting as his own lawyer, was not able to provide evidence or a reason why he should not pay. Silver pointed out to Gates that the expenses occurred in the first place because he had not taken care of matters that needed his attention.

A lawsuit was filed against Gates after the December freeze of 1990. The water system froze and fell apart, and most of the residents were without any water, some for several weeks.

Also, it was disclosed that Gates had sold $5,000 shares to each resident using the system. He did that without securing the proper licensing, and he was charged with securities fraud.

The Monterey County Health Department provided water to the residents and ordered Gates to put the system in working order, and, he has to provide a $3,000 emergency fund for the residents.

Judy Highley, representing the users of the water company, said that Gates has still done very little to repair the system. The residents have done most of the work, and have used their own money, however, she said he told Silver on Friday that 1,000 feet of water pipe was ready to put underground as ordered by the court. The health department asked Silver delay the work until it sees the project firsthand.

Highley said the homeowners appreciate the court's decisions about attorney and emergency fees, but Gates hasn't actually put up the money, yet. All they can do, she said, was wait and see what happens.

Gromko to speak at CVPOA meeting

GERALD GROMKO, executive director of the county Congestion Management Agency, will be the guest speaker at The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association's Annual General Membership meeting Wednesday, Feb. 12.

The meeting will be held at the All Saints Day School on Carmel Valley Road in Carmel at 7:30 p.m.

Gromko is also the director of the county Public Works Department, and will discuss the future of traffic on Valley roads.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call 625-2852.

Indian legends retold

AFTER DECADES of silence, traditional Carmel Valley Indian legends will come to life again as Rumsen Costanoan descendants Alex Ramirez and Linda Yamane share their cultural heritage in Carmel Valley.

Children and adults are welcome to an afternoon of storytelling, hands-on activities, and cultural exhibits, including native plants from Hatton Canyon and their traditional uses.

Festivities will take place on Saturday, Feb. 8 beginning at 12:30 p.m. in historic Rosie's Cracker Barrel, #1 Esquiline Road, Carmel Valley.

Ramirez is a member of the local Onesimo family and author of, "Tjatjakiymatchan," a coyote legend learned in his childhood in the valley. This book is the first publication of the Carmel Valley Indian Cultural Center, a group formed last year by descendants of the area's native people

The author will sign books between 1-3 p.m. at a reception sponsored by the Carmel Valley History Society.

A pioneer remembered

PAUL F. Porter was strong, civic minded, graced with humility, and possessed a keen insight into the future. He was the pioneer of Carmel Valley, whose name is still known far and near.

On April 11, an outdoor performing arts stage at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center will be dedicated in his memory, donated by his loving family.

Paul was the son of Frank and Jet Porter who came to Salinas in the late 1800's. He was born in 1917 and during the 1920's his parents purchased all of the Robles del Rio area of Carmel Valley. Paul's father developed the locality using the Robles del Rio Lodge as the focal point. In order to attract more home buyers, he built a nine hole golf course, known today as "The Meadow." Most of the homes, which are permanent residences today, were weekend getaways and summer homes for "out of towners."

After his tour of duty during World War II, Paul brought his lovely bride, Barbara, to Carmel Valley and went into business with his father at Porter Realty. Paul's married sister, Alexandra Marquard, became partners with them and they then changed the name to Porter Marquard Realty.

Paul was a go-getter and in 1947 purchased Rancho Del Monte, which consisted of the entire area between Rancho Road (Los Laureles Lodge) and Laurel Drive, down Boronda Road and across Garzas Road. In 1949, he built the Rancho del Monte Country Club, which is now the Carmel Valley Country Spa. Later, he developed Tierra Grande and Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

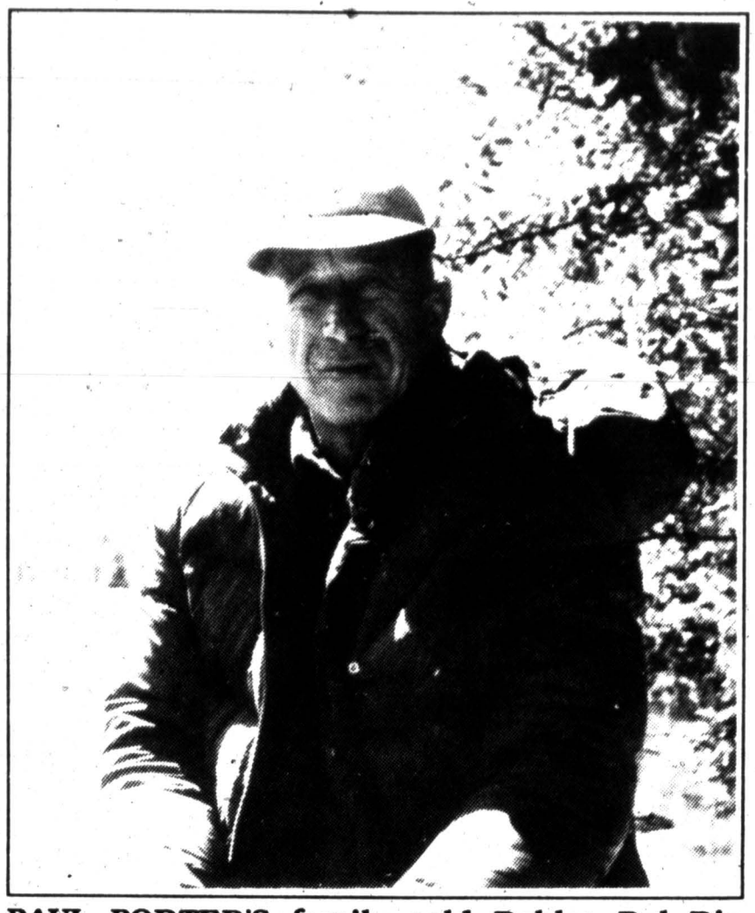
Paul and Barbara had two beautiful daughters, Nancy and Patricia. Nancy is now a partner in Porter/Marquard with her two cousins, Skip and Michael Marquard. Patricia owns Mail Boxes, Etc. at the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

Both Nancy and Patricia each have their own favorite memories of their Dad who passed away in 1983.

"Dad used to raise exotic birds and every morning we'd get up early together and feed them and take care of their cages," Patricia reminisced. "It was a very special time for us. He loved those birds so much and we always had such good times together."

Nancy remembers that in the late afternoons their Dad would take Patricia and her on long horseback rides.

"In those days, you could ride for miles down Carmel Valley Road and never see a car. The river was always so full, we literally floated across holding on to our horses' manes, especially when we crossed at Sleepy Hollow," remembers Nancy.



PAUL PORTER'S family sold Robles Del Rio Carmelo lots in Carmel Valley for as low as $90 in 1933.

Paul was a man who loved his family and the outdoors. On many occasions he would take his girls backpacking into Los Padre National Forest. It was there he taught them how to fly fish Barbara quipped, "and Nancy is still practicing!"

Barbara reflected that "Paul was a man who really cared about his community." He was one of three men to start the Carmel Vally Fire Department and instrumental in putting together the Trai and Saddle Club. He was also one of the leaders who started the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center back in 1952. His vision Carmel Valley was that of a genuine community and he work diligently to make that dream become a reality.

Barbara, Nancy, and Patricia manifest Paul's generous civic spirit. When the three realized the Community Youth Center was trying to fund the building of a stage, they eagerly rushed forward to help. "This seems like the perfect way to honor Dad," said Nancy. "Since he played such a major role in starting the Community Youth Center, it seems so natural he would have wanted to participate the renovation that's going on there now."

Thanks to the foresight and pioneering spirit of Paul, we have a Community Youth Center, a magnificent place to live, and a basically a self sufficient community. Thanks to his wife and daughters, we'll now have an outstanding addition to the Community Youth Center for the entire Monterey Peninsula to enjoy.

Mark your calendars now for Saturday, April 11, the first day Easter vacation. We will celebrate the memory of Paul inaugurating our new stage with the music he loved the most. The live sounds of the marvelous Monterey Peninsula Jazz Orchestra will fill the air and the memories of Carmel Valley long ago will intermingle with the spirit of today.

PAUL PORTER'S wife and daughters, Patricia, Barbara, and Nancy (left to right) have donated a new stage for the Carmel Valley youth center in memory of their fond memories of him. Porter was among the leaders who started the youth center in 1952, and his vision of community has continued to be the theme of his family and those who share his dream.

How are your finances?

"WHERE DID the buck stop?" asked one of my male business clients recently. "1983," I answered.

Pluto (the bulldozer planet) entered the sign of Scorpio on Nov. 6, 1983, and the green-back drought won't end until Dec. 17, 1995, when Pluto enters Sagittarius, the sign of spiritual power.

Pluto is power, and now that it's in its natural sign of Scorpio, we are all learning that what resources we have are dependent on "other people." We have nothing. Everything we have comes from another person. All we're ever capable of is taking what another person has, use it, fine-tune it, and transform it. The secret is in using it for the right cause.

We're also learning a lot about spiritual bankruptcy, as well as financial, discovering that "life is a value," and that man must not only reap everything he sows, but he has to process it.

If we don't clean up our environment, we're going to have to clean it up through our physical bodies, to ingest all the chemical stuff back into our bodies through diseases like cancer and AIDS (which is an accelerated leukemia-type cancer) and go through all the diseases mankind has been sending out. We become the human vacuum cleaner for Mother Nature and servants to her wishes, taking our part in sucking up all the pollution we have created.

Scorpio and Taurus are the primary sign indicators of finance in the chart. Carmel's Sun in Scorpio rules joint finances, where there is a need to allow money to flow through you so that it can be shared with your neighbor. Think of it like irrigation flowing down a canal. Dip in with your bucket and take and use what you need, and don't be a pig and try to dam it up, or you will reap serious consequences from Pluto!

Since 1983, Taurus, Scorpio, Leo and Aquarius have been purging and transforming their lives. These people can tell you about financial loss since 1983.

My father once said, "never risk anything unless you are prepared to lose it completely." And moving to Carmel since the early 80 s was a considerable struggle, insofar as establishing oneself, financially, unless you just happen to be an heiress or bring bags of money with you.

I've watched many of my clients during this Pluto process and all I can think about is this: "We come into the world to love people and use things; then why do we end up using people and loving things?" In many ways, finances are an area to "let go" of so that the required flow can take place. As "Bugsy's" Warren Beatty commented, "Money is just dirty paper."

ARIES can tell you a lot about money, they've become the best barterers in the zodiac and in business. Yes, bartering is coming back. They have Taurus' ability to turn junk into gold, are persistent and with Scorpio skill get what they want.

TAURUS is not confined to one financial outlet. They're practical when it comes to making money and they never, but never, put all their eggs into one basket, if this basket has a dollar-leak, they go to their next basket. I would suggest they start thinking about writing, teaching businessmen how to survive in the 90's, and they will do well to publish their advice.

GEMINIS need emotional security and feel money gives it to them.

CANCER always have "hidden reserves" and they have learned and mastered the "irrigation lesson" of going with the flow.

LEOS, on the other hand, will be learning about spending less and balancing their checkbook.

VIRGOS are wise enough to know they need partners in business—to share—and they attract money like lint on a cheap suit.

LIBRAS, however, can work with Aries. They make good executors of wills and legacies, ensuring all the lovely tangibles are appropriately distributed.

SCORPIO is naturally optimistic about finances, intense, quiet and secretive. Many in my files have buried several wealthy mates. Their instincts tell them that resources don't come from banks.

SAGITTARIUS can either be the "hoarders" of the zodiac, much like a Republican, while the more enlightened species draw upon their intuition to visualize what and how much they need. They generate resources from a psychic reservoir.

CAPRICORN believes in no pain, no gain. They make excellent stock brokers!.They have the potential to be financially successful in present troubled times. They, too, can make excellent executors of wills and legacies because they do exactly what the rules require. They love their safety deposit boxes at the bank. Remember, the movie "Mr. and Mrs. Bridges"? with Jo Anne and Paul Newman? Both were playing out Capricorn roles as a couple.

AQUARIANS can be excessively generous to charitable organizations. They simply make money and don't worry about it, because they're not rational when it comes to money. To tell them they're going broke is like rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic.

PISCES love to spend, spend, spend, and are often impulsive and excessive in their financial lives. They are accountants' nightmares at tax time. Facts? What facts? They run amok with little slips of paper with signatures, numbers on paper napkins taken from restaurants, with I might add coffee stains on them. But it's Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces that can teach others how to get along with less and go with the flow, because they are all water signs and know about irrigation.

S.K.: (male) Santa Barbara. Tell me about the planet Pluto. How does it fit in with world events, the economy and human interaction in natal charts. What are we to learn from its energies? Born 1941.

C.H.: Who among you born between 1937 and 1958 can argue with World War II and all the destruction that was between that time? Then, Pluto was in the fixed-fire sign of Leo, ruled by the Sun and masculine energy. Leo relates to authority, royalty, creation and dictatorship, flamboyant at times, even bombastic, and dominating in a very subtle way. When Pluto was in Leo between 1937 and 1958, we also had the birth of atomic energy and many scientific advances. Oddly enough, Pluto was discovered on Jan. 21, 1930 (when the mafia came into rule), at Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz. by a gentleman who loved the stars, Clyde Tambaugh.

Pluto rules annihilation and the war began shortly after Pluto entered the sign of Leo, and Germany marched into Poland, Italy, Albania and Russia. That's when real power struggles started up. Hitler shouted, "Today we own Germany, tomorrow the whole world." He was a Taurus who was using the negative side, which lusts for power and control.

Everyone born between 1937 and 1958 is now fearing the unknown and total domination. Since Pluto moved into Scorpio on Nov. 6, 1983, how many of you have filed bankruptcy, lost your homes, and literally had to let go and surrender? The stock market crash was part of that process. Until Jan. 16, 1995 the generation born between 1937 and 1958 can expect dramatic changes in their lives, powerful ones.

Ever notice how much "more" food you are consuming these days? That's because food was rationed then and yet some on diets act as if it is rationed. How we continue to play the old tapes! Supermarkets are always full of this Pluto 1937-1958 generation, and they're the ones in restaurants, in waiting lines. Interesting, isn't it?

Pluto is the cataclysmic force that takes away what you no longer need in your life. It's the bulldozer in our natal charts. She destroys (feminine energy), breaks down and marks the end of a certain way of life to reveal a more profound new beginning beneath the surface we've managed to bury.

Pluto destroys what you refuse to change, especially if you are a stubborn sign like Taurus, Leo, Scorpio or Aguarius. Pluto takes you into a labyrinth to meet yourself head on. She ensures that all things will become what they are. What is hidden internally will become exposed externally. The chicken will emerge from the egg, the baby from the womb, and the butterfly from the cocoon. Pluto wipes the slate clean—so you can start over.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Soft Paws

LAST WEEK I talked about declawing in order to save your possessions — and your sanity — when your cat uses your expensive furniture and draperies to sharpen its claws.

An alternative to declawing can be found in a product called SOFT PAWS, available at this time only through licensed veterinarians. SOFT PAWS is a set of soft vinyl nail caps that can be fitted over a cat's nails. The cap makes a blunt tip, instead of a sharp one, on the nail and prevents destructive clawing.

SOFT PAWS has been on the market about eight months. The product is non-toxic (in case kitty should swallow a cap) and causes no discomfort to your pet. The caps last four to six weeks, and it may take one or two applications for your cat to get used to this new idea. He may pick at his new nails for the first week, according to a SOFT PAWS spokesperson, but after his initial curiosity, he should adjust well and take the caps in stride.

Application can be done at home and if you have a friendly, docile cat you might want to give it a try. Otherwise, your veterinarian can handle the job. If you choose to apply the caps yourself, you'll first trim your cat's nails, gently blunting the tips. Dab some of the adhesive (provided with the kit) into the cap and slide it onto your cat's nail. The adhesive dries very quickly. Extra tips are provided.

Since cats can retract their claws with the caps in place, there is no problem walking on any kind of surface. In fact, tests have shown that cats can even climb trees while wearing the caps.

As for the cost factor, a set of SOFT PAWS retails for $15-20, while declawing costs from $70-100.

We haven't personally tried this product on our feline friends, so we can't endorse it. However, we wanted to make you aware of it so you can talk with your veterinarian and make an informed decision about this issue.

HAVE YOU ADOPTED A DOG OR CAT FROM THE DDPF?

I know there are lots of you wonderful folks out there and I'd love to hear from you! Many of you stay in touch with phone calls and letters, and I'm always delighted to know how our guys and gals are getting along. In the past I regularly checked on all of our adoptees, but I'm short of help at the moment and just can't spend time on the phone like I used to.

I hope you'll take a few minutes to call (625-4017) or drop a line (Box 223163, Carmel 93922). If you have a photo, that would be the icing on the cake! I truly care about each and every little four-legger who passes through my pet foundation, so please stay in touch with me — and thanks for caring!

That's all for this time. See you next week!

Hands across the table

RON FAIA of Carmel has been president of the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors four out the last six years and he says he has yet to sit down with the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation or Pebble Beach Company to discuss the Youth Center's role in the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am Tournament.

The Carmel Youth Center has operated concession stands at the tournament, originally the Crosby, since the early '50s and derives nearly 75 percent of its yearly budget from the sale of hot dogs, soft drinks and candy bars at the AT&T.

Faia says there used to be a spirit of camaraderie and cooperation between the Youth Center volunteers and Pebble Beach Co. food and beverage people. But things have changed in the last couple years. Inch by inch, PBC tents have moved into prime locations, selling the same hot dogs and soft drinks as the Carmel Youth Center.

"It gripes me that we haven't had an opportunity to sit down and talk about this," Faia said. "We'd like to throw some things on the table. I have some suggestions for solutions.

"Our participation in the AT&T Tournament is our one opportunity all year to bring in as much money as we can," he continued. "Let's face it, the Carmel Youth Center is the last bastion of any association this golf tournament has with Bing Crosby. They're moving us aside without telling us anything just so they can make more money."

Pebble Beach Co. and AT&T Tournament officials admit to the lack of communication and claim they want to work with the Youth Center to make sure everyone comes out a winner. R.J. Harper, Pebble Beach Golf Links head pro and AT&T Tournament Operations Director explained his position.

"We want everything to be mutually beneficial. We want to work hand in hand with the Youth Center so nobody loses."

Lou Russo, AT&T executive director echoed Harper, "I wouldn't want to see them get slighted," he said.

Here's your chance guys.

SYMBIOSIS

Eric Morris of The Edlos called their recent Carmel concert symbiotic. Appropriate. Especially if you look up the definition of symbiotic. "The living together of two dissimilar organisms, especially when this association is mutually beneficial."

I call it a breakthrough.

The Edlos, otherwise known as The Bad Boys of A Capella, recently performed to a full house at Sunset Center. Their repertoire included Eric Morris in black spandex tights and a gold jock strap, bumping and grinding to "Duke of Earl," the Edlos as four monks who doff their robes to reveal nuns' habits and trill, "happiness is a warm bun" while passing a bagel around, the Motown sound and tear-away white tuxedos as they sang, "Papa Was A Rollin' Stone."

The Edlos' range of numbers included a song about earthquakes written by a cat, a piece about late-night TV and a mind-blowing version of "Hurdy Gurdy Man." Their encore number, the beautiful "Greenfields" featured Feral Bill Davis in a leopard skin.

The Edlos may call themselves bad boys but they're also well- schooled vocal musicians, with talents Carmel audiences can appreciate. Ed Cohn, Larry Venza, Eric Morris and Bill Davis are opera-trained and have appeared with the San Francisco Opera, Oakland, Marin and West Bay Operas, Santa Fe Opera, the San Francisco Symphony and Hidden Valley Ensemble. Davis told the diverse audience he spent seven years with the Carmel Bach Festival as he pointed down to his former seat in the chorus.

While this column does not review musical events as such it's worth noting the reaction of the audience to The Edlos' program. It could be compared to the jubilation in Eastern Europe when the Berlin Wall came down. The audience, some local, some from the Bay Area and ranging in age from 10 to near 90, clapped, whistled, hooted, laughed hysterically and stamped their feet. Sunset Center shuddered but held its ground.

The Edlos'appearance is part of the continuing Performance Carmel series. Coming Saturday, March 7 is the world-renowned dance troupe, Pilobolus.

tournament brunch hosted by Pebble Beach Co. President Tom Oliver.

He was just one of the notables who included former astronaut Alan Shepard, local incumbents Sen. Henry Mello, Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman and Mayor Dan Albert. Other dignitaries included former Supervisor Mark Del Piero, Carmel Mayor Jean Grace and judges Ralph Drummond and Jonathan Price.

The air was buzzing in the big tent on the third fairway of Pebble Beach Golf Links. This Sunday brunch is typically a political get-together, but in an election year it bordered on a caucus.

IRONIES & INTRIGUES

FOR the first time ever, AT&T will not be involved in the U.S. Open Tournament. Seems they couldn't reach an agreement with Pebble Beach Co. on how much their tent should cost.

IT'S now legal to make love in the back seat of a car in New York. This is not a concession to teenage romance but a sign of hard times. For many people a car is all the home they have.

Front seat is the living room, back seat, the bedroom.

STEVE Gann of Carmel has been photographing the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am Tournament for 22 years. This year Steve's number came up. He drew the number one photo armband.

VEL Garrihy, founder of the Lifesavers, reports several men about town have requested a seat next to the sexy dish who posed for this year's invitation to "A Hollywood Spectacular." In case you haven't seen it, a Marilyn Monroe look-alike in a red sequined mini and matching pumps is draped across the multi-fold party announcement. Is she a real person or a composite of local effort."

• Excavate a broad, shallow channel to facilitate flow on the south overbank during floods, which would eliminate the need to raise and strengthen levees on the north side of the river.

The cost $1.1 million.

• Build a levee around the wetland north of the lagoon to protect existing homes from flooding when the lagoon fills. That, the report said, would minimize the need for artificially breaching the lagoon.

The cost: $533,452.

• Build a flood wall around the north edge of the lagoon, which would serve as a levee, but be less intrusive and minimize disturbance of existing wetland. The cost: $1 million.

• Excavate a shallow overflow from the river into the wetland north of the lagoon, which would create more of an "edge" habitat within the wetland.

The cost: $10,534.

Business Beat

February will be anything but a dull, winter month for Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors & Convention Bureau members. Fine food, a romantic hideaway, hair fashions and adventures by the sea will highlight Evening Mixers and AM Networks in February Abalonetti's, the newest restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf, will host the Thursday, Feb. 6 Evening Mixer. Join Chamber/VCB members, guests and staff in enjoying wine and antipasto treats created by the restaurant's skilled chefs. After the mixer, Abalonetti's invites members to stay for a special dinner at a special price. Get rid of the tie and kick of those high heels at the Thursday, Feb. 20 mixer hosted by Adventures by the Sea, 285 Figueroa St., next to Wharf #2. Members and guests are invited to the first Beach Party of 1992. A roaring fire on the beach and inside will chase away the chill, as will the great food and beverages provided by Monterey Vineyards and Monterey Brewing Company. Cost for Evening Mixers is $6 for Chamber/VCB members and $10 for non-members.

Two AM Networks are also planned for the month. A special Valentine's Day AM Network will be held at the Lighthouse Lodge, 1249 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove, on Friday, Feb. 14. Join the lodge's staff in touring one of the peninsula's newest bed & breakfast inns and put your name in for a chance to win a night in the Presidential Suite. For a February finale, Hair Technology, 434 Pacific St. in Monterey, will show off its facility and talented stylists at the Friday, Feb. 28 AM Network. AM Networks are small gatherings that offer light refreshments and a more intimate atmosphere for getting to know other business people. They are held from 8 to 9 a.m. and are free of charge.

For more information on Mixers or AM Networks, call 648-5359.

The Sardine Factory has been nominated for a "Best of theBest Restaurant Award" in both the contemporary/ continental and seafood categories. Theawards were presented at an awards ceremony to be held at The Beverly Hills HiltonFeb. 4.The prestigious awards are given by The American Academy of Restaurant Sciences.Famed food and wine expert Robert Lawrence Balzer, who administered the selection ofrestaurants for the Travel/Holiday Awards for 18 years, is the chairman of the AwardsSelection Committee.

"The restaurant industry is lauding his appointment as the first step inmaking these awards another Arnerican tradition," according to the Awards' founder, JohnThomas. "Through the awards, we'll seek out the best restaurants, giving credit to thoseprofessionals in the culinary world who truly deseNe to be recognized, and at the same time,offering guidance to American diners in search of the perfect restaurant."

Nominations for the "Best of the Best Restaurant Award" are made by food andrestaurant editors throughout the country. Nominees are visjted several times by anonymousdiners, and finalists are selected by a blueribbon panel composed of nationally respected nonrestaurateur members of the food services industry.

From a list of 50 nominated restaurants(Bronze Award Winners) in each category, the Selection Committee will determine fivefinalists (Silver Award Winners), and of those, one Gold Award Winner will be designatedas "America's single BEST restaurant in its category.

The selection of the Sardine Factory as a finalist comes as no surprise to diners who have enjoyed its trendsetting cuisine for over 23 years. The Sardine Factory has won a multitude of awards for both food and wine. The restaurant is noted for its blend of old world service with a touch of California style and a menu featuring classic continental disheswith an accent on seafood and pasta.

Co-owners Ted Balestreri and Bert Cutino have consistently set the highest standards for the famed restaurant and are renowned throughout the food service industry. Balestreri was president of the National Restaurant Association in 1985-86 and named National Food Service Operator of the Year in 1984. Cutino was 1988 Chef of the Year and vice president (1984-1988) of the American Culinary Federation. Both continue to be national leaders in the restaurant industry.

Monastery Beach plan

department director, Donald Murphy, dropped the six-year project to eliminate shoulder parking at the beach was based on the recent decision by the supervisors to consider amending to the coastal plan.

Strasser Kauffman said a decision not to amend the plan would enable the parks department to reverse their current position at another time.

Murphy was appointed by the governor, and if he is replaced, said Strasser Kauffman, a new director may want to reinstate the departments previous off-shoulder parking plan.

Murphy said that he doesn't see that happening because of the economy and the lack of local support on every level. The parks department pursued the off-street parking solely because it was in the coastal plan.

Another director with another set of conditions along with full support might change the attitude of the department toward Monastery Beach, said Murphy, "but we put a lot of energy and money into the project, and no one would support us. We are not going to be left out to dry in this issue any longer."

The proposed plan, which required the cutting down of part of the 150-year-old eucalyptus grove at the site, placed the parking lot at the northwest end of Monastery Beach near Bay School.

Amending the coastal plan would safeguard against any future plan to put a parking lot at the beach, and, "if the public wants an amendment I will move forward to work with the constituents," said Strasser Kauffman.

She said that the problems of safety and visual pollution at Monastery Beach still need to be addressed, adding that the proposed Carmel City parking plan is excellent especially because the city is willing to be flexible. "It's worth exploring."

Carmel's plan allows for 62 cars to park at the beach at one time, each space available is 22 feet in length, and all parking would be in one direction, south, on the west side of Highway 1. There would be no left turn to the beach for northbound traffic. In addition, there would be five beach access routes, a footpath, warning signs about hazards of the area, a public transit bus pullout, and 20 optional spaces for parking overflow at the south end of the beach adjacent to Point Lobos State Reserve.

Strasser Kauffman said that the public has come forward with a lot more participation and good will than in the past.

"I appreciate the company. For the past six years I twice initiated turning down state parking lots. I've been fighting this for a long time, and the immediate public response is real democracy in action. I'm delighted to have good strong company."

She said that for any parking plan to be effective, however, it is imperative that Caltrans provide a clear document of how it will handle the stretch of land along Monastery Beach, which they have been asked to do on several occasions.

"Central to the whole dispute is Caltrans unwillingness to tell the supervisors what they have in mind," said Strasser Kauffman. "My hope is to get a straight answer from Caltrans. We need a clear response about direction and traffic signs plus relocation of cars. Also, we need to know if there is indeed a serious traffic problem. Some representatives say yes there is, and some say no. It's arbitrary. Caltrans needs to put it in writing so everyone gets the same answer, then maybe we can flush out the problems."

John McMillan, Caltrans deputy district director, said that as far as he knew Caltrans has not been asked for any specifics concerning Monastery Beach.

He said there was a guiding document, the Transportation Route Concept Report that looks at transportation deficiencies along Highway 1 and sets perimeters for a level of service to meet the needs of the locals.

However, McMillan said that was a planning guide and did not expect that Strasser Kauffman would be aware of it.

Caltrans is not the leading agency involved, said McMillan, the state parks department is, but a survey could be done depending on what the county wanted to look at.

As far as the nebulous response about traffic problems at the beach, McMillan said that Caltrans does not have a high ratio accident history at Monastery Beach. But, he said, "that doesn't mean the potential is not there."

Sounding like Strasser Kauffman, McMillan said the county has not clearly defined how they want Caltrans to participate.

"I'm really not sure what role we are in with regard to the Monastery Beach stretch of highway, but we would like to come to any of the meetings and get involved," said McMillan.

Amending the coastal plan is possibly a solution for the future of Monastery Beach, but Assemblyman Sam Farr said that the issue is greater than just the beach parking problem.

Farr had recommended that the coastal commission delay action on the Monastery Beach parking lot, but he is not sure if amending the coastal plan will help in the future.

Because of the proximity to Point Lobos State Park, Farr said that the proposed parking lot would not have absorbed the park's traffic, but there is even a bigger issue for long-range planning as the county starts to develop.

He said that the county's Congestion Management Agency is looking at alternative ways to deal with Big Sur, Monastery Beach, and coastal parking.

For example, Farr said, there has been considerable talk about future use of off-street parking as a holding place to depart by bus to and from Big Sur if the highway is overly congested.

That is just one alternative to a future of traffic problems facing the county, said Farr, and amending the coastal plan might deter a parking lot at Monastery Beach, but it won't take care of future problems.

Sincere conservation effort

Meanwhile, a saving grace for the district during these dry times has been the sincere conservation effort continued by all sector's of the peninsula community.

The peninsula saved 32 percent in the calendar year 1991, according to Cofer, consulting a 1987-88 base year. That is a bigger savings than the 30 percent in 1990, when rationing was mandatory, he said. And the conservation was accomplished across the board at nearly same level — for commercial customers, residential customers and golf courses, the general manager reported.

"They've taken the drought seriously," said Henrietta Stern, the district's senior project coordinator, pleased with the year-end results. "People have maintained their good conservation habits."

NUCLEAR THREATS IN SOVIET UNION TOPIC OF LECTURE

The breakup of the Soviet Union may soon give meaning to the slogan "Have Gun, Will Travel." The difference is that the "gun" in question bears little resemblance to the choice of previous mercenaries.

These weapons are nuclear in nature and apt to be sold not as a finished product (which are easier to be controlled) but as design information and technical know-how. The disgruntled former Soviet Union nuclear scientists and engineers would be the vendors. More disturbing yet, the sellers might be a new breed of Russian (or other former USSR ethnic group entrepreneurs who have discovered the free market in nuclear technology and materials. And, they have found it with a vengeance.

Potter is uniquely qualified to discuss this critical subject He recently conducted a workshop in Moscow on nuclear nonproliferation. He has had articles on this subject in the NY Times, Wall Street Journal and other major media.

The speaker recently initiated the Soviet Nonproliferation Project. Now in its initial phases, this project draws on Potter's established contacts with major institutional and individual participants in the former Soviet Union to effect that nation's long-term nonproliferation policy. It would simultaneously contribute to the strengthening of the international nonproliferation regime. Potter is a Professor and Director of the Center for Russian and Soviet Studies at MIIS. He also directs the Nuclear Suppliers Project and the International Missile Proliferation Project.

the planning commission passed a motion requesting that it be directed by the city council to initiate a study of the commercial zoning. Unfortunately, it may be that the consummate result is due to the premise on which this study was undertaken.

The report's seven recommendations belie the text that precedes them. The Planning Commission presumed to begin its attack on the General Plan's tenet of incontrovertable protection for the resident and his preeminently residential community.

Of course, call resident-serving business a concept, but apparently the Planning Commission has never learned that though abstracts don't lend themselves easily to definition, you better not start fooling around with them.

Unique, quality business is a concept too, and the way I read my general plan, intended to be correlative. But one thing certain is that any report that proposes any removal or alteration in the concept of resident-serving and business in Carmel is like separating God from Holy Writ, or Mom from Apple Pie.

There is a lot more wrong with this study but maybe the biggest mistake has been the tin tub the Planning Commission has thrown its baby into without seeing both tub and baby are full of holes.

What's needed is something concrete and it's not here. There's no back-up material for any of the many conclusions drawn and to top it off, it turns out to be an ill-tempered document. There has been considerable evidence of opposition in the public hearings but try to find it, any of it, in the text.

Many of us reading this zoning study feel a travesty has been inflicted upon Carmel's trusting well-intentioned citizens, its Council, and yes, its business community. Read this report and weep.

Disdain for the environment

Dear Editor:

As I was walking along Carmel River State Beach a couple of days ago, I saw smoke from a fire billowing up from Point Lobos State Reserve and thought I should call Smokey the Bear.

But, lo and behold, when I picked up the newspaper the next day, I learned that these Smokeys had set the fire themselves!

So the state's park rangers finally carried out their annual threat to burn our park, and at the public's expense. Now we have charred expanses to meadowland to look at, thanks to their make work concept of forest "management." These guys probably learned their trade at Yellowstone.

But how long do they think they can keep this up? Is this just a display case park for our generation of sweatless suburbanites—a political statement of their disdain for the unkempt environment implied by the name "Wolf Point"? Or don't they realize that the organic undergrowth they've burned was vital to replenish the humus which nourishes the next generations of plant life? Who knows what they learned at Yellowstone U.?

It's all doublespeak to me when they explain that they burned all the undergrowth so that some Giant Rye reeds will grow better. Next they want to blame it on the Indians.

But contrary to the opinion of Ranger Glen McGowan, the Ollone Indians didn't burn their grasslands, at least until the Spaniards arrived. After that, there's no telling what the Indians might have done. And if they didn't actually do it, they could often be paid to confess all kinds of unnatural practices to suit their conquerors.

But the Indians knew that you don't increase the propagation of grass strains by burning them. They knew that because it's impossible.

Now our overly industrious Smokeys are probably confusing the effects of their set fires with the coincidental consequences of a good drought lifting rain. Just wait. After the spring rains, we'll be hearing their old Yellowstone refrain, "Oh, what lovely sprouts our fires have created." Tom Pollack wrote their textbook.

Deadly deadlines

IN ELEMENTARY and junior school, we students seldom if ever had firm deadlines. If we handed in an assignment a day or two late, it was usually accepted. Now, as high school students, we are suddenly learning about real deadlines, where if they are not made, the response is "tough cookies," and there are few, if any, exceptions.

Sophomores and juniors first encounter deadlines with the PSAT and SAT registration deadlines. The final day the registration forms must be postmarked, many students can be found putting their number 2 pencils into overdrive, madly filling in the proper bubbles on the applications. Discarded SAT bulletins litter the Carmel High campus after school as the mad dash to the post office ensues.

Seniors get to tiptoe through a minefield of deadlines. College applications seem to be most important, for if a student misses a deadline, he/she simply isn't going to have a chance to attend the school of choice. After college application deadlines have passed, the scholarship deadlines approach. Again, a missed deadline is a lost opportunity. Once the date has passed, there's no second chance.

Some seniors also get to worry about Advanced Placement and English Equivalency Exam registration deadlines in the spring. Deadlines for the Disneyland trip and for the senior trip to Mexico also pressure June graduates.

Seventeen seniors, six juniors, and a sophomore have banded together throughout the year to meet yearbook deadlines. Of all of the aforementioned deadlines, meeting yearbook deadlines may be the most stressful. The yearbook staff just finished a huge deadline last Friday. If the deadline had been missed, the penalty would have been severe. If even one of the four yearbook deadlines is not made, the yearbook would be shipped from the printers in Utah after school got out for the summer. The student body would have the staff's hides if that ever happened, and so far it hasn't. To make sure it doesn't happen this year, various staff members have stayed at school from two to eight or nine at night working on their sections as the deadline approached.

Deadlines have been taken seriously!

POET/SONGWRITER ADDRESSES WRITERS CLUB

Poet and songwriter Josh Jossi is the featured guest speaker at the Tuesday, Feb. 11 meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Writers Club. He will perform selections from his large body of works — 3,000 poems and 150 songs.

Jossi's published works include Back to the Source (Half Dome Press) and his multi-media show "Stone, Sea, Earth, and Sky," a combination of his own poems and photographs. He is presently working on an autobiography consisting of fictionalized facts, dramatic narrative and poetry.

Born in Pennsylvania, Jossi attended schools in the eastern states. At the age of 16, he changed career goals from nuclear physics to poetry and has been writing and performing his work ever since. Locally, he has performed his songs and poetry at Yosemite National Park and Pacific Grove's Portofino Cafe. He now lives and works on the Monterey Peninsula.

The program begins at 7 p.m. in the Community Room of the Monterey Public Library at 625 Pacific St. All interested persons are welcome to attend without charge. For further club information, call 372-6052.

JUNIPERO SERRA SCHOOL MONTE CARLO NIGHT TICKETS ON SALE

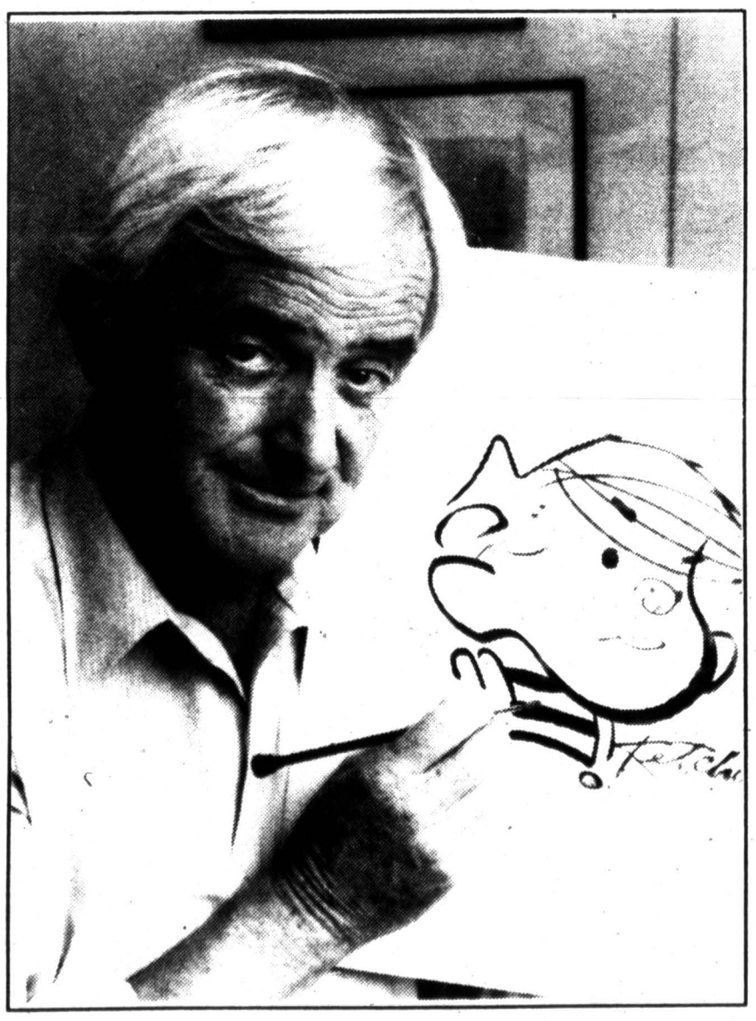
Reservations are now being taken for Junipero Serra School's Monte Carlo Night, set for Saturday, Feb. 29 at the Carmel Mission Basilica. Tickets, at $15 per person (and includes $5 gaming scrips and buffet), are limited to this event and can be obatined by calling Maria Anderson at 624-7527. All proceeds benefit Junipero Serra School.

The evening includes buffet and gambling games such as craps, blackjack, roulette, poker and slots.

EQUESTRIAN DECATHALON RESULTS REVEALED

Despite dreary skies, occassional showers, and a lot of mud, a handful of die-hard horse enthusiasts gathered Jan. 5, at the Carmel Valley Trail & Saddle Club for an equestrian decathalon. Riders competed in ten events, each one testing a different aspect of riding ability. The horse show was a fund-raiser for C.H.A.P.S., or California Horse Adoption and Protection Society. This organization is dedicated to humane treatment of horses, and is working to get a bill passed in California making it illegal to transport horses to slaughter in cattle trailers with no food or water. Bonnie Stoehn, the director of CHAPS, judged at the show, and gave a short talk about the organization and its goals.

The winner of the gold medal was Marcy Connelly, the silver went to Candace Cotton, and Aimee Heers won the bronze medal.



Ketcham if you can

LOCAL CARTOONIST, author and philanthropist Hank Ketcham will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Friends of Harrison Memorial Library, to be held Sunday, Feb. 9, at 3 p.m., in the Garden Room of the Church of the Wayfarer (Lincoln and 7th, Carmel). Residents and library-lovers are cordially invited to attend.

DEADLINE APPROACHES FOR COUNTY SCIENCE FAIR

The deadline for submitting applications to participate in the eighth annual Monterey County Science and Engineering Fair is coming up. Completed application forms must be mailed prior to Feb. 14, 1992 for entry into this year's program.

Any student enrolled in grades 6 through 12 in a public, private or parochial school in Monterey County may enter. Students enrolled in grades 9 through 12 must enter the senior section and are eligible for the International Science and Engineering Fair ISEF). Students enrolled in grades 6-8 must enter the junior section.

The Monterey County Science & Engineering Fair is scheduled for March 27-29, 1992. The Fair provides an opportunity for students to investigate a problem in science or engineering using the scientific method and to communicate the results of that investigation to a larger audience. The purpose of the Fair is to stimulate in young minds an active interest in science and engineering; to provide an educational experience through exposure to the judges and the public; and, to give public recognition to students for the work they have done.

The Science and Engineering Fair is jointly sponsored by The Science Fair Coalition: The Monterey County Office of Education, The Naval Postgraduate School, The Herald, First National Bank of Central California, Pacific Bell, Monterey Bay Aquarium, Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula, and the Junior League of Monterey County.

Application forms may be obtained through the Monterey County Office of Education (MCOE). Interested parties may phone MCOE at 373-2955.

EMPLOYMENT LAW DISCUSSED

On Tuesday, Feb. 11, Monterey College of Law presents a program on "Employment Law: Hiring Practices and Termination Procedures," at to 9 p.m., at the Holiday Inn, 1000 Aguajito in Monterey. The program is open to the public. There is a $10 fee and advance registration is required. The program is co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

Speakers will be two local attorneys, Susan Dauphine (from the law firm of Hoge, Fenton, Jones & Appel in Monterey) and Michelle Welsh (from Stoner, Welsh & Schmidt). The two speakers have a great deal of experience in the field of employment law and also in presenting seminars of this type. They will discuss current laws which affect both the employer and the employee. There will be time for general questions and answers.

This program is one of a series of Community Legal Education programs presented by the law school throughout the year on a variety of subjects. Call 373-3301 for more information about these or other classes.

COUNTY GRAND JURY FOREMAN APPOINTED

The appointment of Lynn Swerrie as foreman of the 1992 Monterey County Grand Jury was announced today by the presiding judge of the superior court, William Wunderlich.

A 10-year resident of the county, Swerrie is executive director of the Monterey County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Swerrie earned a bachelor's degree in physical education and a master's degree in eduction from the University of California, Berkeley, and taught at both the high school and college levels prior to joining the Red Cross.

Swerrie has been active in a wide range of other activities, serving most recently as president of Mariposa Hall, a center for nonprofit organizations in Monterey that allows them to work together, to share resources and to reduce costs.

The major function of the Monterey Chapter Grand Jury is to examine county and city government and special districts to ensure that their duties are being lawfully carried out. The Grand Jury reviews and evaluates procedures, methods and systems utilized by these entities to determine whether more efficient and economical programs may be employed.

FOUNDATION ENDS 1991 WITH A TOTAL OF $1,294,000 MADE IN GRANTS

The Community Foundation for Monterey County made a record total of $1,294,000 in grants to nonprofit agencies in 1991. This figure includes grants from both the general endowment and restricted funds. The Foundation's endowment grew by nearly 20 percent in 1991, a new record.

From September through December, $63,900 in grants from the general endowment were made to 20 local agencies. Recipients of these funds were: Alliance on Aging - $6,900 for part-time development coordinator at the Food Bank; Beacon House - $7,500 toward refurbishing of the main building; Boys & Girls Club of the Monterey Peninsula - $7,500 toward the new Seaside facility; Buddy Program - $3,000 toward five matches of youth to adults for one year; Chartwell School - $4,000 for psychological support services to dyslexics and their families;

Ecology-minded

MONTEREY SPORTS CENTER ADDS JEFF VIERRA TO STAFF

One of the most respected figures in Monterey County recreation administration, Jeff Vierra, has joined the staff of the Monterey Sports Center. Vierra has been named Recreation Supervisor of the facility, slated to open in June 1992. According Sports Center Director Pete Cutino, "Jeff Vierra was chosen from a field of over 80 applicants and is extremely capable. We are enthused about Jeff's knowledge and expertise and are delighted to have him on board." Vierra brings to the Monterey Sports Center years of training and experience in recreation. Prior to his current position in Monterey, he was facility manager of the Salinas Community YMCA. Vierra, a native of Monterey County, went to schools in Gonzales and Salinas and also attended San Jose State and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. He has been a teacher and worked in aquatics as a lifeguard, water safety instructor and swim team coach and then as director of aquatics at the Salinas Community YMCA. He rose through increasingly responsible positions at the facility, where he eventually oversaw all aspects of the its operations.

Vierra believes the skills he acquired at the YMCA have equipped him to be in charge of the daily recreational activities of the Sports Center. He is enthused about the challenge and intends to see that the part-time staff, numbering from 60-75, will help create a healthy, positive environment of relaxation and enjoyment. Vierra says, "I can't wait for the Center to open. The citizens of Monterey deserve this long-needed facility." The Sports Center is a project of the City of Monterey Recreation and Community Services Depanment. Offering a wide range of recreational activities for residents of the greater Monterey area, it will house two indoor swimming pools with a water slide and sun deck, a 14,000 square-foot gymnasium that can accommodate up to three court games simultaneously, an exercise/weight room, tiny tot activity room and full locker facilities.

HANK KETCHAM CREATES LEAP DAY LOGO FOR FAMILY RESOURCE CENTER

Hank Ketcham, creator of the syndicated Dennis the Menace, comic strip, was so delighted with the children's art contest for Leap Day, he volunteered to do the final drawing himself. Gen Asaki, a 9-year old student at the Del Rey Oaks Elementary School, won the grand prize of four passes to the Santa Cruz

I Boardwalk. Ketcham's drawing, which will be used for the commemorative T-shirts and posters, was based on the winning design, depicting a jumping frog and calendar.

Leap Day is a family fun day on Saturday, Feb. 29, at Monterey Peninsula College. Admission and parking, games, races, and other activities are free. Proceeds from the sale of food and T-shirts benefit the child abuse

Obituaries

Luis Federico Wolter, II

Luis Federico Wolter, II a life long resident of the Monterey Peninsula, died on Jan. 19 at his residence in Carmel Valley. He was 59.

Born in Pacific Grove on Jan. 25, 1932, Wolter attended local schools, graduated from Monterey High School and attended Monterey Peninsula College.

He was the owner of Wolter's Hacienda Market in Carmel Valley until he retired in 1985. He was also a member of the Lower Valley Advisory Board, received the Good Egg Award from the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce, and will be remembered by local school children for his Pumpkin Patch in the valley where he entertained school children from all of the peninsula schools.

Wolter was a member of a Carmel Valley pioneer family, and a descendant of an early Spanish bandit Tiburcio Vasquez.

He is survived by a brother, Russel T. Wolter, and a sister, Jennie T. W. Luce, both of Carmel Valley. He has several nieces and nephews.

Memorial services were held at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley. Cremation was arranged by the Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove.

The family requests any memorial contributions be sent to the American Heart Association, Carmel Youth Baseball or to the donors favorite charity.

munity service throughout our city for some time now."

Specifically, the scouts removal of litter from Carmel's streets and parks and their planting of seedlings in Mission Trail Park was listed in a letter of commendation from Mayor Jean Grace. The mayor extended thanks to scouts Phillip Rios, Brock Lichtenegger, Jason Baird, Cardiff Schmitz, Evan Smith and Gregory Franke.

Not to be forgotten though was Parking Officer Lisa Panetta. Panetta received a five-year service award for her professionalism, her personality and her "warm sense of humor."

In addition to her parking ticket responsibilities, Panetta has been trained as a police dispatcher. She was also commended for her willingness to cover shifts in both capacities and her active role with the department's honor guard.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Lincoln's uniqueness

On Feb.12, we commemorate the anniversary of the birth in a Kentucky backwoods log cabin of Abraham Lincoln, our 16th president. Among world heroes, Lincoln continues to exert a unique appeal, not only for his fellow countrymen, but for all men who love freedom and who see his human,humane,humble and humorous charm. Abraham Lincoln generates universal respect and love. Once after a cabinet meeting in the darkest days of the Civil War he defended eloquently three men who hated him and all he stood for. His secretary said, "Mr. President, why do you try so hard to make friends of your enemies when you are in a position to destroy them?" Lincoln responded gently, "Do I not destroy my enemies when I make them friends?" Oh Lord, help us to put real Christianity into practice as Abraham Lincoln did and to follow the advice of this graffiti. "Pick your friends carefully instead of to pieces."

Paycheck contributions to Social Security by workers and employers not only fund retirement benefits but also provide family protection in event of a worker's disability or death. Of the 38 million Americans who receive monthly Social Security benefits, 27 million are retirees and their spouses and five million are widows who are covered by a spouse's earnings record. In addition, three million workers are eligible for benefits because of long-term disabilities. Social Security also helps to support three million children of deceased or disabled workers.

Author James Michener upon turning 84 observed that he hadn't closed the book on his prolific career. "I am working very diligently," he told an interviewer. "The only change in my life is that I take a nap in the afternoon." Michener's definition of work included teaching a creative writing class at Eckerd college in St. Petersburg, Florida, and lecturing at the University of Texas.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are need to deliver 280 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 280 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 25 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually a sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to prepare the meals at the Meals on Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The agency also serves lunch to 125 seniors at the facility every day. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Speakers on Alzheimer's available

November is Alzheimer's Disease Month and several of the board members of the Monterey County Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association are offering their professional expertise and experience to organizations that want to learn more about the disease.

Alzheimer's disease affects 4,400,000 victims nationwide, and more than 4,000 in Monterey County. For each victim, at least one other person is directly affected by the stresses involved in caregiving. The time, energy and emotional involvement necessary to care effectively for an Alzheimer victims grows as the disease progresses and the victims become unable to do anything for themselves.

Poets to stage reading for AIDS Awareness Week

By JOHN DETRO

DOWNSTAIRS IN Pacific Grove Plaza. Barbara Murphy's Portofino Coffee House.

That's where — as part of AIDS Awareness Week — area poets will stage a public reading entitled Open Your Heart to People with HIV/AIDS. Time: Tuesday night, Feb. 11, beginning at eight o'clock.

The event's co-sponsored by Monterey County AIDS Project and the Monterey Peninsula College English Department. Organizer Tey Roberts serves as Project treasurer; her husband Elliott Roberts teaches English at MPC and will be master of ceremonies.

A donation "of $3 or more" will be requested at the door, says Tey, "with proceeds going right into the Project — maintenance needs or such direct client services as food and rent money."

Bards who've signed on as presenters of their own work include Pat Brown, David Bury, Joseph Cloonan, Matthew Friday, Edward Haneffant, Joanie Olmstead, Elaine Giam Pietro, Nancy Reeve-Wilson, Julie Roseman, Carol Staudacher, Kathy Whilden. Audience members will have an oppurtunity to read poems, letters and journals on the reading's overall theme.

"This's the third year in a row that Portofino has had such an event there," Tey continues. "Matthew Friday was extremely helpful with getting the poets together. Word-of-mouth mattered, of course, and I also drew from AIDS support groups and staffers and volunteers — anyone associated in any way."

And: "Here's what I like about the occasion. We'll have a chance to express our feelings on what working for people with the virus has meant to us — the happiness and the pain."

Tey adds that she sees the reading as "a celebration of the people's courage and of the plain old trivia of those daily lives. I mention the trivia part because it's so darned important to understand that they're no different from anyone else."

Valley woodcarver features works at open house Feb. 8

MARK ANDREW, sculptor and master woodcarver, will celebrate an Open House on Saturday, Feb. 8 at the historic Rosie's Cracker Barrel, #1 Esquiline Road in Carmel Valley from 3 p.m. to dusk.

Andrew has produced a wide range of exquisite artwork of regional importance over the past decade. His lastest work, a Hondoran Mahogany entry door, will be on display at the show.

The sculptor studied in Switzerland, and continued to study sculpting in college. He has been creating sculptors in bronze, stone and wood for the past 20 years, working primarly as a commissioned artist.

Andrew also works directly with the Carmel River Steelhead Association and Bat Conservation International making limited edition pieces of the endangered species.

The two groups use the profits for educating the public about saving the animals. Andrew enjoys facilitating the means for funding environmental education.

The artist feels there will be a high environmentally influenced art market in the future because nature reflects how we are doing.

Andrews considers his work specific to the Monterey Peninsula and gets tremendous pleasure from creating a piece of art that is regionally historical.

MARK ANDREW, sculptor and master woodcarver, will celebrate an Open House on Saturday, Feb. 8 at the historic Rosie's Cracker Barrel.

"The knowledge that I'm making something that will endure beyond the short time that I will be here, something that moves people, and will do so long after I'm gone, is a positive reaffairmation of my life."

Faulkner-Krupski duo releases new recording; perform Sunday

THE PRODUCER'S Series is pleased to announce the release of "From the Gates of Heaven: Traditional Lullabies" by local Monterey Peninsula artists Margaret Faulkner and Amy Krupski.

The anthology of traditional lullabies is performed by harpist Amy Krupski and sung by Margaret Faulkner in four different languages. The album was produced by Tim Culbertson and released on Chelsea Records.

To celebrate the release of their cassette, Faulkner and Krupski will perform at a benefit concert, Sunday, Feb. 9, at the Monterey Peninsula Unitarian Church on Aguajito road in Carmel.

Concert begins at 3 p.m. and a reception to meet the artists will follow at 4:30.

Tickets will be available at the door; $3 for children under 12, and $5 for adults. For more information call 624-7404 or 384-2609.

MARGARET FAULKNER and Amy Krupski will perform Feb. 9.

Ted Goerschner's impressionist works set to open at Zantman

"Luminosity" is the hallmark of Ted Goerschner's easy-going impressionist florals and landscapes. Although he uses oil as his medium, it is as though he paints in liquid colored light, a light which suffuses his paintings with a late afternoon richness and calm.

Goerschner is first and last a painterly painter who captures and recreates magical scenes with lavish brush stroke and rich color.

With training at the Newark School of Fine Art, Tampa University, and the Art Students League of New York, Goerschner had a classical education. His works are now held in private collections throughout the United States and Europe. He has exhibited in the National Gallery in New York, and in museums and galleries in Scottsdale, Santa Fe, Chicago, Boston, Texas, New Jersey, and Carmel.

Goerschner is a signature member of the Oil Painters of America and has been published in American Artist, Southwest Art, U.S.Art, Twenty Oil Painters and How They Work, Art and Graphics, contemporary Western Painters and was the featured artist in the July/August, 1991 issue of Art of the West.

The public is cordially invited to meet Ted Goerschner during a reception in Carmel at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth and Mission Street location on Saturday, Feb.8, from 4 to 7 p.m. The show will hang through Feb. 21.

For over 32 years Zantman Art Galleries has been the first stop on the fine art collectors list when visiting Carmel and Palm Desert. Representing over 75 artists from many corners of the world, the galleries feature a broad spectrum of media and styles of painting and sculpture.

For further information about this show or any other of their fine artists, please contact Helen Whitcomb, sales director, at Zantman Art Galleries, 624-8314, fax 626-8408, or toll free at (800) 344-9359.

91-92 Second Tuesday Film Fest features Bogart, Bacall in classic

THE 1991-92 Second Tuesday Film Fest continues at the Sunset Center in Carmel-by-the-Sea on Tuesday, February 11 at 8 p.m. with a screening of the 1945 classic, "To Have and Have Not.." Starring Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart, and including Walter Brennan and Hoagy Carmichael, this famous adventure was directed by Howard Hawkes and based on a novel by Ernest Hemingway.

The basic story is simple: an American charter boat captain in Martinique gets involved with Nazis. However the film is also notable as the first pairing of Bogie and Bacall. The action sizzles as 19-year old Bacall makes her husky-voiced screen debut.

This screening replaces the originally scheduled Casablanca, which has been temporarily pulled from distribution in anticipation of its 50th anniversary.

Tickets are $2.50 and available at the door beginning at 7 pm. For more information, please call 624-3996.

The remaining schedule for the Second Tuesday Film Fest follows:

"Bronco Billy," Tuesday, March 10, at 8 p.m. Clint Eastwood, director; Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke, Scatman Crothers (1980)

"Mutiny on the Bounty," Tuesday, April 14, at 8 p.m. Charles Laughton, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone (1935)

"Slaughterhouse Five," Tuesday, May 12, at 8 p.m. Michael Sacks, Ron Leibman, Valerie Perrin (1972)

"Harold and Maude," Tuesday, June 9, at 8 p.m. Ruth Gordon (1971)

ARTS & LEISURE

Paired to perfection at PG's Melac's

PACIFIC GROVE'S popular Melac's restaurant will open its doors to American Institute of Wine and Food (AIWF) members and guests only on Sunday, Feb. 9, at 6 p.m. for a special food and wine pairing dinner. Melac's, owned and operated by Cordon Bleu-trained Chef Janet Melac and her husband, Jacques, is known for its country French cuisine. Fred Dame, Master Sommelier will make the wine selections.

Friends of Jung to explore how I Ching speaks to today's issues

HOW AN ancient Oriental book of divination — The I Ching or Book of Changes — can still speak to today's personal and world dilemmas is the focus of the meeting, following an informal potluck reception on Friday, Feb.7, 6:30 p.m., at All Saints' church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel. It is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung, which also provides strawberry shortcake for the potluck.

To launch discussion, participants will use excerpts from Dr. Jung's famous foreword to the Helmut Wilhelm translation of The I Ching, in which he says, "Like a part of nature it (The I Ching) waits until it is discovered . . . for lovers of self-knowledge . . . it seems to be the right book."

Both the yarrow-stalk and the coin method of consulting the oracle will be demonstrated by Phoebe Pagano of Monterey. All participants will then frame their own questions and use either method to obtain individual insights.

The public is invited to this and all other events sponsored by the Friends of C.G. Jung, which is an informal collection of people who share an enthusiasm for the seminal writings of the noted Swiss psychiatrist. They find, through discussions like the one planned for Feb. 7, practical applications of those writings in their everyday lives.

No prior registration is required; a modest donation is suggested. further details: 649-8809; 284 Foam St., Monterey.

Theater Review

By James P. Kinney

Rock-a-bye Ibsen

EVEN A cast of veteran, talented players like Marlie Avant, Alam Smith and Ron Genauer could not breathe sufficient life into Henrik Ibsen's venerable Rosmersholm for it to qualify as a satisfying evening's entertainment this past weekend at Carmel's Indoor Forest Theater.

The play — offered here in an uncut version — goes on for over three hours. Maybe that wasn't too long for Scandanavian audiences of Ibsen's time, happy to escape from that chilly Norse cold to experience a play that generated its own warmth in dealing with the burning issues of their day.

But here, in balmy Carmel, California, over 100 years later, the production seemed to me too slow-moving, too repetitive, just too goldurn long.

John Rosmer (Ron Genauer), the last in a line of respected religious ministers living at Rosmersholm, has over a period of time become an apostate to his faith. Before the action of the play starts, a troubled wife has committed suicide. Influenced by the thinking of young, emancipated Rebecca West (Marlie Avant) whom he and his wife had earlier taken into their home, Rosmer rejects attempts by his stuffy brother-in-law, Dr. Kroll, (Alan Smith) to return to his former conservative way of thinking and behaving.

Even a visit from a sly, vengeful journalist, Peter Mortensgaard, (Steve Harris) threatening to reveal the contents of a letter written by the wife before her suicide cannot deter the popular minister from continuing to promote his liberal, progressive agenda. But when he and Miss West are forced by outside circumstances and their own inner emotional pressures to confess to each other that their free-spirited, mutual friendship has subtly evolved into a passionate, mutual love, the stage is set for their inevitable tragedy.

The deadening effects of static religious "faith" is not a new theme with modern audiences. Maughm's Rain and Sinclair Lewis' Elmer Gantry come to mind. St. Augustine's 4th century classic definition of Faith as "consent with searching" suggests a dynamic openness to changing realities that keeps belief from ever settling into complacency and hypocrisy.

As a person raised in an intensely religious environment myself, I remember vividly an intense flash of insight at age 17 or 18 that many people who call themselves "believers" use their religion as a club to hit others perceived as "unbelievers" over the head with. That, instead of rejoicing in Faith as a gift freely given by God to be cherished and so shared by example that it makes itself shine so brightly as to be rendered nearly irresistible to those that see it.

My unhappiness with the length and sluggish pace of the production did not extend to the six onstage performances, all of which I found solid and commendable.

Genauer's protagonist, Rosmer, was genial, courageous and bighearted, though as the script points out almost entirely devoid of humor. Avant delivers a charming Rebecca who is emotionally complex, generously supportive and more aware than the others of the true nature of the conflicts raging in and around the man she secretly realizes she loves.

Most of the show's comic relief is delivered by Harris as the avenging journalist and Ron Nelson as a threadbare, alcoholic tutor named Brendel. Harris uses stammers, smirks and sly silences to convey to the audience his carefully nurtured past wrong and his urgent intent to inflict as much damage on the despised minister as possible. Nelson's down-on-his-luck, obsequious tutor mooching outrageously off the minister brought a wonderful sense of irony and comedy as obviously appealing to the observing characters onstage as well as to the audience. A seamless performance!

Alan Smith, as he has so often in the past, brings dignity and believability to a character that in less capable hands might have been merely disagreeable and antagonistic. Lenore Opalach is a slightly mysterious, quirky Mrs. Helseth, the domestic who connects the eroding emotions and aspirations inside Rosmersholm with mysterious appearances of white horses in the gloom and foreboding inside. Nice touch, Mr. Ibsen.

Marcia Gambrell Hovick directs; production design by Charles Houghton; technical assistance by Maria Lojkovic; costumes by Loel B. Shuler. Show stage-managed by Cindy Womack. Rosmersholm runs through Feb. 16th. See papers for times and dates.

Council in agreement

Duffy want to divide a building on San Carlos and Eighth so two shops can do business there. But the planning commission had argued the division would result in an increase in employees, meaning an additional parking space would be needed.

Such changes normally result in an in-lieu parking fee, which in this case amounted to around $25,000, according to the appellants. After much discussion about the fact that the new use would actually result in a decrease in the number of people parking in downtown lots, the councilmembers unanimously rescinded the in-lieu fee.

"This is a little shopping center that's in the best tradition of Old Carmel," Grace said in concurrence. The building previously housed a real estate office with 28 employees, but less than ten workers will run the two new boutiques.

In other business, the council teamed up on new guidelines for planning commission appeals to the council. The new wording states that new evidence should not be presented during appeals, and it reiterates the fact that the council has the prerogative to return such cases back to the commission.

Later, Carmel Disposal Service was granted some changes on it's exclusive contract with the city. Among these are a $1.95 increase in the single can rate, changing new monthly bill from $6.75 to $8.70.

The two-can rate will climb from $10.45 to $13.45 and three- four- and five-can customers will see a $4 to $6 rate increase. The $73 average commercial rate will jump $21 to $94 per month.

Much haggling was done over the timing of garbage pick-ups which will now start after 7 a.m. on a six-month trial basis. Grace unsuccessfully argued the later pick-up would result in the congestion of city streets, but White said his yard is not set up for nocturnal garbage collection.

In other action, Don Kramer spoke for the Forest and Beach Commission on the tree-cutting ordinance. The city council candidate said the commission would like to see the ordinance simplified.

As adopted by the council, the measure makes it unlawful to cut down any pine, redwood, oak or cypress greater than six inches in diameter or 19 inches in circumference. The ruling further qualifies any species capable of growing 25 feet with a 10-inch diameter or 32-inch circumference is also protected unless the property owner acquires a city permit.

Kramer said an across-the-board six-inch diameter specification would make the ordinance easier to interpret.

But the council didn't want to tackle an interpretation of the 45 percent FAR ordinance that would make it legal to enclose patios and gazebos in some instances. Robert and Edith Tannenbaum were asking for an increase in the floor-space they're allowed so they can fully-enclose their patio and make it a solarium.

Robert Tannenbaum said he and his wife would be able to "spend time in greater sun," but Fischer said a variance would set precedent for "an increase in FAR's all over town."

"Yes, it would be a solarium until they put up blinds," Fischer added. He and the rest of the council decided not to open up a can of worms, and chose to table the matter.

Lastly, the $10,000 gift to the Carmel Public Library Foundation was granted to fill in for 37 percent reductions in the Monterey County book and program budget.

On Stage

Talley's Folly

Talley's Folly, by Lanford Wilson, winner of the Pulitzer Prize and New York Drama Critics Circle Award, opens Friday, Feb. 7, in the SRO Theatre at Monterey Peninsula College. Directed by Patrick McEvoy, the production will continue Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through Feb. 23.

Relating the courtship of Sally Talley and Matt Friedman, Talley's Folly is a warm and joyous play, starring Maria Lojkovic and Ron Cohen.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, at 7 p.m. Sunday. General admission is $6. Call the MPC Box office at 646-4213, or MCTA Box office at 655-3200 for reservations.

Rosmersholm

Staff Players Repertory Company continues Henrik Ibsen's great study of conscience, Rosmersholm Thursday through Sunday at the Indoor Forest Theater, Santa Rita and Mountain View in Carmel.

Featuring Ron Genauer as Rosmer, Marlie Avant as Rebecca West and Alan Smith as Dr. Kroll, Rosmersholm, will play Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. through Feb. 16.

Ibsen was disillusioned by the mutual fury of liberals and conservatives in his native Norway in the 1800's. Rosmersholm is the famous playwright's look at the thicket of religious and political growth. Even more, he explores how individuals change convictions, move to action -- and sometimes self-deception. The title refers to the "white horses of Rosmersholm," ghostly visions that for hundreds of years have haunted the distinguished Rosmer family.

For tickets and reservations, call the Staff Players Repertory Company at 624-1531. Half-price previews are scheduled for Jan. 29 and 30.

Beyond Therapy

Pamela Murphy and Jerry Walker return to the GroveMont Theater Arts Center for their third season in Christopher Durang's hilarious comedy, Beyond Therapy, with previews at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 5 and 6 at the center.

The production opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 7, with performances at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and 7 p.m. Sundays through March 14.

The production is directed by Sid Cato and the cast includes Jim Webber, Jeannie Ferrara, Craig Schow and Kent Carlson.

Tickets are $12, seniors $10 and can be obtained by calling the Monterey County Theater Alliance Box Office at 655-3200.

Flowers for Algernon

Santa Catalina's Upper School drama students will present three performances of Flowers for Algernon in the school's Performing Arts Center.

Performances are scheduled for 1 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 6, 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 7 and Saturday, Feb. 8.

The public is invited to attend and admission is free.

The drama by David Rogers, based on the novel by Daniel Keyes, tells the story of Charlie, a mentally retarded man, who rapidly changes from a moron to a genius following experimental surgery. The tension heightens when Algernon, a mouse that has undergone the same surgery, beginns to show signs of regression. Conrad Selvig directs the student production.

For information, call the Performing Arts Center at 655-9341.

Jesus Christ Superstar

The GroveMont Theater will continue its successful production of the rock opera Jesus Christ Superstar, the opener of its 1992 Monterey Playhouse Season at the Monterey Playhouse, 425 Washington St. in Monterey.

The production will run Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 7 p.m. through Feb. 9. In addition, a midnight show has been scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 9.

Seating opens one-half hour before showtime, with a wide variety of desserts, beer, wine and soft drinks available before the show and during intermission.

Jesus Christ Superstar, which GroveMont presented last summer for a successful three-week run, is directed and choreographed by Laura Akard, with the Andrew Lloyd Webber/Tim Rice score played by local rockers Tom Ayres and the 39 Lashes. Returning to recreate their roles will be John Newkirk as Jesus, John Farmanesh as Judas and Jodi Belflower as Mary.

Tickets are $12 general admission, $10 students and seniors and military and $8 for children 12 and under. Gala tickets are $20 each or $35 for two. Tickets and reservations are available through the MCTA Box Office at 655-3200 or the GroveMont Theater at 649-6852 or 655-PLAY.

Annual Olio Revue

California's First Theatre continues its Annual Olio Revue at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

This production will be presented by Troupers of the Gold Coast (their 498th production) and will play Friday and Saturday nights through January. All shows are at 8 p.m.

The Olio Revue is an evening of variety with singing, dancing and melodramatic skits suitable for the whole family.

Reservations can be made by calling 375-4916. The bvox office is open Wednesday through Saturday after 1 p.m. Admission is $7 for adults, $5.50 for seniors and teens and $4.50 for 12 and under.

California's First Theatre is located at the corner of Pacific and Scott streets in Monterey.

Wild Thing

THAT WILD man of comedy, Sam Kinison, will make a special appearance at, believe it or not, Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row for two shows, 7 and 9 p.m. this Friday, Feb. 7.

Kinison, the rotund, long-haired former traveling evangelist, has always managed to get his name in the headlines, whether he's featuring former Jim Bakker secretary Jessica Hahn in his Wild Thing video, stiffing Joan Rivers on her talk show or making outrageous comments. He's a regular on the talk show circuit, especially on Arsenio Hall and Dave Letterman's shows and is currently featured in the sitcom Charlie Hoover on Fox Television with Tim Matheson as the latter's "bad boy" alter ego (scary thought).

Kinison is known as much for his shouting, manic stage act as anything, and he's not exactly everybody's cup of tea, but when he's on a roll, look out, he can be the funniest man in America. He's actually toned down his act a tad to stay on TV, but his club shows will be raw and uncensored.

Kinison regularly sells out larger venues (2,000 to 5,000 seats), so an appearance at Doc's is quite unusual and a coup for the bookers. Tickets will be $20 at the door (or reserve them by charging on your credit card by calling Doc's), but they'll undoubtedly go fast. Local rockers Lovers & Strangers will play after Kinison's second show. Who knows, maybe Kinison, who plays guitar, will join the band onstage at Doc's and jam. It wouldn't be the first time.

For ticket info call 649-4241.

UPCOMING EVENTS with a musical bent on the Monterey Peninsula and outlying areas:

• Jimi Hendrix impersonator Randy Hansen will play Doc Ricketts' Lab Thursday, Feb. 6 along with Strange Days, which is a Doors copy band. Bring your own headbands and tie-died shirts.

The following week Doc's continues its high-profile bookings with Bobby Kimball, formerly of studio rock band Toto, Feb. 13; Roomful of Blues, Feb. 17 (a show not to be missed); Royal Crown Review (dubbed the "Kings of Gangster Bop"), Feb. 18; harmonica ace James Harman fronts the James Harman Band (a must show for diehard blues fans), Feb. 24; Robben Ford returns March 2; Mardi Gras with The Sundogs is set for March 3; rockers Molly Hatchett blow into town March 4 and Johnny "Clyde" Copeland kicks into gear March 16. Slated for April are Debbie Davies, Marcia Ball and John Mayall.

Local bands playing include Lovers & Strangers, Friday, Feb. 7; The Young Presidents, Saturday, Feb. 8; The Lazy Hurricanes, Sunday, Feb. 9; Terry Hanck and the Soulrockers Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 10-11; Lovers & Strangers on Wednesday, Feb. 12; and the Young Presidents once again on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 14-15.

Doc's, by the way, is considering changing its Blue Monday blues shows to Wednesday to see if it can draw a few more people in. Monday just doesn't seem to be a great night for attracting the crowds necessary to keep this thing going. If you have any thoughts on the matter, let me know (624-0162).

Info on all shows can be had by calling 649-4241.

• Jonah and the Whale Watchers continue to play Shanty Malone's every Friday night and occasional Wednesdays at Monterey Brewing Company. And now the band is being booked every Thursday night at The Club of Monterey on sort of an experimental basis to see if there's an audience out there for reggae. The band will also be celebrating reggae legend Bob Marley's birthday, Thursday, Feb. 6 at the Monterey Brewing Company. Of course Marley songs will be at the top of the set list. If you like roots raga-reggae, these are the places to be every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night. Call 375-3634 for info.

(For dinner reservations and ticket information on events at Shanty Malone's, call 626-0604.)

• Portofino Cafe in PG will feature Santa Cruz environmental folk artist Sev Williams in an 8 p.m. show, Thursday, Feb. 6, followed by comedy folk duo Lou and Peter Berryman (out of Wisconsin, hotbed of comedy folk), at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 7, with more folk slated for the next night with Kernville Folk Festival winner Rob Laurens at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8. Local folkster Mahesh opens that show. Covers are $5, $7 and $6 respectively.

For a special treat at Portofino Cafe, plan to attend a musical event entitled "Bravo," Monday, Feb. 10, with music from South America featuring Ramon Romero, who performs on the Paraguayan harp, along with flamenco/classical guitarists Scotland Spelias and Los Mayas, Carol Vassar on harp, and the incomparable Macucho Bonilla on percussion. Flautist Kenny Stahl is also expected to drop in the proceedings to lend his skills. Macucho himself has become somewhat of a serendipitous presence in this area, showing up at a variety of musical events to showcase his talents on congas and other percussion instruments, including, amazingly, a suitcase and cardboard box, which he pounds with his hands. He (along with pianist Bob Phillips et al.), more than

John Muir's story

AS NOTED here previously, Sierra Club now celebrates the 100th anniversary of its creation by the naturalist and writer John Muir.

It happens that Sierra Club Bookshop on Carmel's main street (Ocean between Dolores and San Carlos) has more than a dozen titles from The John Muir Library. These handsome paperbacks tell the good man's story in his own words and at his own well-lighted pace.

On this desk today: Muir's Story of My Boyhood and Youth (Sierra Club Books; 160 pages; $9.95). We get his time in Scotland, life on a Wisconsin farm, early impressions of the natural world, knowledge gained, movement into larger spheres (the university). John had a terribly stern father who made the lad complete assigned tasks at seemingly any personal cost; delight came from such outdoor activities as bird-watching most carefully with pals. The thirst for and deep appreciation of beauty couldn't be stilled—

"The nests, I fear, with the beautiful eggs and young birds, were prized quite as highly as the songs of the glad parents, but no Scotch boy that I know of ever failed to listen with enthusiasm to the songs of the skylarks. Oftentimes on a broad meadow near Dunbar we stood for hours enjoying their marvelous singing and soaring. From the grass where the nest was hidden the male would suddenly rise, as straight as if shot up, to a height of perhaps thirty or forty feet, and, sustaining himself with rapid wing-beats, pour down the most delicious melody, sweet and clear and strong...."

John's obvious talent for noticing stayed with him throughout all his days. The big gifts that he passed down were based on it—

"The loud clear call of the handsome bob-whites was one of the pleasantest and most characteristic of our spring sounds, and we soon learned to imitate it so well that a bold cock often accepted our challenge and came flying to fight. The young run as soon as they are hatched and follow their parents until spring, roosting on the ground in a close bunch, heads out ready to scatter and fly. These fine birds were seldom seen when we first arrived in the (North American) wilderness, but when wheat-fields supplied abundance of food they multiplied very fast...."

We're let in on the shaping of a poet and bright soul: "In those early days, long before the great labor-saving machines came to our help, almost everything connected with wheat-raising abounded in trying work...and it often seemed to me that our fierce, over-industrious way of getting the grain from the ground was too closely connected with grave-digging. The staff of life, naturally beautiful, oftentimes suggested the grave-digger's spade. Men and boys, and in those days women and girls, were cut down while cutting the wheat. The fat folks grew lean and the lean leaner...."

When he left home to pursue higher education, the father said: Depend on yourself entirely. Notebooks apocket, Muir took that dictum with him into the wild Sierras.

MEET PEPPER—Book Bag readers are invited to submit favorite photographs which they've taken. This one comes from local lenswoman Pepper Ernstein.

Do ye ken John Muir? If not, visit the Sierra Club Bookshop. They're both strong and valuable friends.

Music Corner

By Nathalie Plotkin

A welcome arrival

ENSEMBLE MONTEREY, a new arrival on the local musical scene, gave its debut performance Sunday afternoon in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

Conducted by its founder John Anderson in an all-Mozart program, it is a thoroughly professional organization which showcased the talents of some of the finest wind and brass musicians who perform in the area.

Taking an unusual approach, the purpose of the group is to explore and exploit a body of musical literature almost never heard locally. They are concentrating on compositions which are not quite orchestral, yet are more than "chamber music," employing the resources of winds, brasses, strings, percussion and voice.

The repertoire is projected to include the widest possible variety of works which fit this description and can be from any period from Medieval to the Modern. Nearly every great composer has created ensemble music for winds, employing different numbers and choices of instruments. Written for a variety of reasons, only some of them are conceded to be masterpieces since, in most cases, these composers have produced other works which provided their claim to greatness.

In the case of this program, both aspects of this situation were explored with very interesting results. Mozart's "Serenade No. 10 in 8 Flat Major' K 361," known as the "Gran Partita" calls for 13 instruments and includes along the more usual oboes, clarinets, bassoons and French horns, two basset horns which are now obsolete. They look like a cross between a clarinet and an alto saxaphone and sound like a very muted version of this odd combination.

The music itself is delightful. It is a serenade with an open-air, entertainment character, of lightness and good humor. The fertility and versatility of the scoring as handled by the polished participants made it a joy to listen to and as long in duration as it was, I was sorry when it ended.

Basically one heard the core of an orchestra. With only one double bass present to act as underpinning, one's ears were left free to enjoy the inspired and infinite permutations and combinations of the instrumental usage. The colors and resonances of the tonal couplings and the spice that the basset horns provided, all were to be relished.

In such a group all the players must be of solo quality There is no string mass to hide behind, but the first desk players received a greater share of the spotlight due to the structure of the writing.

Oboist Bennie Cottone, clarinetist Art Austin, basset hornist Revea Orsten and bassoonist Jane Orzel were sparkling virtuosi, playing with the greatest skill and much sensitivity throughout the partita.

The program opened with an 18th century transcription of the highpoints of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" for two oboes, two clarinets, two French horns, two bassoons and double bass. Such arrangements were very popular as dinner or entertainment music, but to a modern listener it lacks the multi-dimensional attributes that one is so familiar with. To me, even an artistically performed Liszt piano transcription is more musically palatable.

As the groups' first public outing, it was a major effort and the playing was understandably cautious and constrained. The overture went well since, in the original, the wind parts are quite prominent.

In the arias, the creativity of Mozart's accompaniment figures was highlighted because the vocal sound was missing. However, bassoonist Orzel came very close to filling the lack with her fine mellow tone and cantabile phrasing both in the tenor and baritone arias.

John Anderson and the ensemble were very warmly applauded not just for the quality of their music making, but also for the imaginative concept and willingness to break new ground that they have come up with. I look forward with interest to their continued endeavors.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Gone, never forgotten

THE BLUES Lounge part of God's heaven probably still was welcoming Willie Dixon today. That major composer, musician and advocate for the roots music died last week (1/30) in Burbank. Heart failure took him. Age 76.

Here at home, the 1992 Monterey Bay Blues Festival may well be dedicated to his memory. Fest board member Lee Durley told me he'd propose the move formally during this week's regular session.

"I think the step would be entirely appropriate," Lee said. "(Board member) Lewis Jackson and I started discussing some gesture right after Willie Dixon passed away. I'll let you know what's decided."

Willie Dixon wrote more than 500 songs. They included blues classics like Little Red Rooster and Backdoor Man and You Shook Me and on and on. "He was the backbone of Chicago rhythm and blues," said Keith Richards from The Rolling Stones. "Without him, the music that helped shape our world would have remained another regional style."

He also played powerful standup bass and was the first Windy City contact sought by many young talents who traveled up from the Delta country. "He gave me advice about the blues," Chuck Berry said. "Being new to the business, I just did as I was told. Willie Dixon was wonderful."

I've been writing about jazz and blues for three decades, and say from personal experience: this gentleman demonstrated the big difference between mere fame and human greatness. It can be told by one word. Generosity.

The year was 1970. Before I taped him (the radio special would be aired later), Willie Dixon made sure that my producer and I had a good breakfast. Then, seated beside a motel swimming pool, he called over band member Walter Horton. He gave us a rich, slow, detailed, hour-long monologue with Shakey Horton's mouth harp playing behind every phrase.

About Paul Butterfield: "This little white kid loved blues guitar. I would sneak him into South Side clubs under my overcoat."

And: "Back then (Chicago '20s), none of us knew a thing about copyright law. I can't count the number of tunes I sold outright for $50 apiece."

RED HOLLOWAY

But he learned. Willie Dixon's royalties made him wealthy. He put much time and money into the Blues Heaven Foundation, non-profit unit which taught young folks about the music and lobbied for the legal rights of its makers.

LAST SEPTEMBER, localite Sumiko Inoue and friends staged a jazz benefit for her International Disabled Exchange Adventures (IDEA), which helps physically challenged people take cultural enrichment trips both ways between here and Japan. It was a success. So now her grand IDEA sponsors a no-cover public concert at the Marriott Hotel's Monterey Bay Club on Tuesday evening (2/11) from 7-10 o'clock.

The lineup: group fronted by clarinetist Eiji Kitamura ("the Benny Goodman of Japan"), cornet master Bill Berry, 21-piece Albatross Big Band from Japan's Tochigi Prefecture, Big Sur flugelhorn star Jackie Coon plus drummer and vocalist Dottie Dodgion, banjo pro Eddie Erickson, Buddy Jones on bass. I was asked to MC and hopefully will share those happy chores with jazz writer Bill Minor. (He should be back from a Hawaiian vacation just in time.)

"Eiji played the first concert and really wanted a return date," Sumiko said. "Albatross had a choice where they'd go — maybe Las Vegas, maybe San Francisco — but picked Monterey Bay Club when they learned what IDEA was doing. There will be voluntary donations, and information about the organization."

Big band members were trained on Basie charts. They'll be coached in Los Angeles by Berry, Monterey Jazz Festival music director, shortly before Tuesday night's gig. This will be the aggregation's first United States appearance.

THE BLUESY tenorman Red Holloway came up in Chicago. He worked with Dizzy Gillespie, Sonny Stitt, Jay McShann, so many more. On Sunday afternoon (2/9) he'll be the guest star at the jazz series of Doc Ricketts' Lab on Cannery Row. Booked by reedman John Cortes for owner Kelly Leonard, these four-hour shows start at two o'clock. It's $3 per at the door.

Red has recorded on the Concord label with such artists as Gene Harris, Ray Brown, Ernestine Anderson. He's also a very funny man whose humor's right off the classic chitlin' circuit. Not to be missed.

• Brazilian guitarist Carlos Barbosa-Lima (another Concord Records heavyweight) plays the Fridays At Eight Series in Hidden Valley Music Seminars (2/7). Tickets cost $12.50 and may be bought when the box office opens at 7:30. First set starts half an hour later.

Carlos studied with Andres Segovia. Segovia said Barbosa-Lima was "gifted by the goddess of music." Pretty good recommendation. The program will be drawn from a varied nine-album output.

• This column has wondered aloud when the fine Latin percussionist Macucho Bonilla would get his own band. Well, Portofino Cafe books a Macucho-led ensemble called Bravo for Monday evening (2/10) at eight o'clock. Just $10 per at the door.

Fine players behind him — guitarist Scotland Spelias, Carol Vassar (harp), Los Mayas (guitar and vocals), flutist Kenny Stahl. Special guest artist: Paraguayan harpist Ramon Romero. See you there?

• Pianist Bobby Phillips announces From The Heart — a "jazz concert and dance just in time for Valentine's Day." Pacific Coast Church will benefit (suggested donation of $10). It starts at 7:30 on Thursday evening (2/13) in Pacific Grove's Robert Down School.

Joining Bobby on the playbill: Randy Masters Latin Jazz Quintet with Kenny Stahl, vocalists Lee Durley and Shelly Cullin, keyboardist Lee Lambert, Bryan McConnell on bass, drummer Jimmy LePine. Potluck dinner at six. "Bring enough to feed several," Bobby

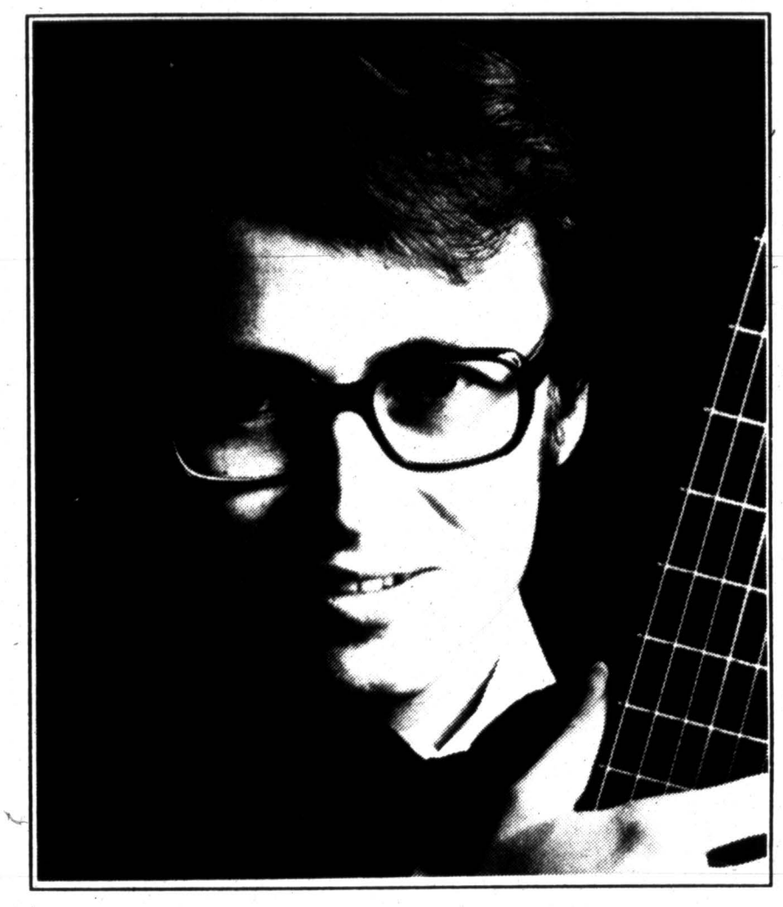
• The Clock Restaurant near downtown Monterey now offers Sunday Brunch Jazz from noon till three. Keyboardist Dave Clay gains strong support from Don Rosefs on bass.

• The bright folks at Carmel Classic Arts Festivals plan Carnaval Monterey on March 14. If you wish samba lessons before then, call fest reps at 372-0375 for details.

Kuumbwa Jazz Center and Tandy Beale Dancers will collaborate in presenting Carnaval Santa Cruz on April 11 at Santa Cruz Civic Auditorium.



CARLOS BARBOSA-LIMA

PUBLISHERS HAYBERT Houston and Stella Brandt of the statewide California Jazz Now monthly magazine were here the other day. They established outlets at Abinante Music and Monterey Bay Coffeehouse Bookshop (downtown Monterey), Carmel Music Co. (downtown Carmel), Portofino (Pacific Grove). The February issue has an excellent cover story on KJAZ Radio founder Pat Henry.

Running in February and March — excerpts from my book about the late jazz vocalist Carol Mildon. Reviewed: Freddie Hubbard, Kenny Kirkland, World Saxophone Quartet, so on.

BY QUOTING an unidentified audience member, critic George Warren from the daily newspaper included a most amazing statement in a recent feature story. The piece said one local jazz musician's harmonic adventuring had taken that young man beyond Charles Mingus. George loves brashness, and really cares about the arts. The following comments go forth with affection—

Even if the observation rather miraculously were true, it misses the point. For Mingus and other departed giants, the chops game (technical expertise) was merely square one. The reality ride of Charles, John Coltrane, Lester Young, so many others: get out of the way and let the music's spirit (Universe Breath) play though. Young African American instrumentalists and vocalists speak openly today about this spiritual path.

Technique without the soul's commitment must be counted amongst The Saddest Things. Young white kids don't have the ancient traditions—the ancestral linkage— and they can't find them in music schools. Like Butterfield with Willie Dixon, they must seek and respectfully ask.

I wish for George a trip to Kuumbwa in Santa Cruz on Monday night (2/10). There he'll encounter Mingus Dynasty, band which celebrates the great and goofy man's legacy. Shows at 7:30 and 9:30. It's $14 advance (Ticketmaster) or $16 at the door.

Mingus at full strength was a terror and wonder (one thinks of Oya, the Yoruba goddess of hurricanes and the marketplace). On the stand will be trumpeter Jack Walrath and reedman George Adams (Mingus alumni), along with reedmen Craig Handy and Alex Foster, brilliant pianist John Hicks, bassist Mike Formanek, Victor Lewis on drums.

Mingus among us. Still.

The art of weaving by tying knots probably began in the 1200's by Arabians but it wasn't called macrame until about the 1400's. That's an Arabic or Turkish word meaning fringe.

The SPCA will hold a training seminar for the HUG-A-PET PROGRAM on February 15th - 9:30 to 12:30 am in the Education Building. Hug-a-Pet volunteers take shelter animals or their own pets to visit residents at convalescent hospitals and retirement homes. Professional caregivers tell us that Hug-a-Pet visits are what residents ask for most. Where other contact fails, cuddling a puppy or a kitten proves to be a successful form of therapy — for both humans and pets.

After a short orientation, we will carpool to Driftwood Convalescent Home in Salinas where trainees can have first-hand experience introducing our shelter pets to residents of the home. Call D'Anne Albers, Coordinator of Volunteers at 373-2631, ext.223 to RSVP and for more information.

The SPCA of Monterey County, The Carmel Pine Cone and the Pacific Grove Monarch, as well as the business people represented on this page, present this animal feature. Interested in adopting one of these animals or one of the many others? Visit the SPCA of Monterey County animal shelter - Open 7 days a week at 11:00 am for adoptions.

PLEASE NOTE: Animals pictured are subject to prior adoption or return to owner/companion. Adoptions are to qualified homes only. If these animals have been adopted, there are other adorable animals available...come on out! The shelter is located at 1002 Monterey Salinas Highway 68 (6 miles east of the Monterey Peninsula Airport).

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
LOCAL AGENCY FORMATION COMMISSION OF THE COUNTY OF MONTEREY

Pursuant to Government code Section 56934, notice is hereby given that the Local Agency Formation commission of Monterey county will consider the following:

1. A proposal to amend the Sphere of Influence of the Carmel Area Wastewater District to include 0.189+/- acres. The proposal area is located at 24309 San Pedro Lane, north of San Luis Avenue and west of Highway 1 in Carmel. A Sphere of Influence is a plan for the probable ultimate service area and physical boundaries of a local governmental agency.

Pursuant to Section 15319 of the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) Guidelines, it has been determined that the Sphere of Influence amendment is exempt from CEQA under the Class 19(a) exemption. Class 19(a) consists of annexations to agencies of existing structures developed to the density allowed by current zoning.

2. A resolution of Application submitted by the Carmel Area Wastewater District proposing annexation of 0.189+/- acres to the Carmel Area Wastewater District. The purpose of the proposal is to eliminate a health hazard by providing sewer connection to replace a failed septic system. The proposal area is located at 24309 San Pedro Lane, north of San Luis Avenue and west of Highway 1 in Carmel.

Pursuant to Section 15319 of the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) Guidelines, it has been determined that the annexation is exempt from CEQA under the class 19(a) exemption. Class 19(a) consists of annexations to agencies of existing structures developed to the density allowed by current zoning.

The public hearings will he held on Tuesday, February 25, 1992 at 7:00 p.m. in the Board of Supervisors Chambers, Monterey County Courthouse, 240 Church Street, Salinas, California. All persons wishing to make presentation for or against the proposals will be heard. Information on the proposals is on file at the LAFCO Office and may be examined by any interested persons.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on February 21, 1992 at 9:30 a.m., located at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections of file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. It you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

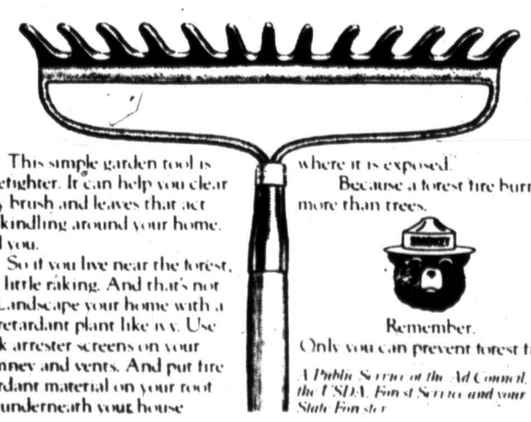
WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE — American Heart Association

HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.



This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Remember.
Only you can prevent forest fires.
